PREFACE

The Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī of Haribhāskara, also called Bhāskara, is published as the first volume of my new Series Saṃskṛta-Kośa-kāvya-saṃgraha. The work is important from various points of view. 1. It brings to light for the first time quite a large number of good poets in their true perspective. 2. The verses chosen by Haribhāskara as well as those of his own are precious gems, the majority of which have till now been imbedded in the vast ocean of Sanskrit MSS. 3. Further, this work throws much light upon the literary activities of our country in Sanskrit about three hundred years ago. 4. Moreover, it shows that the Mahomedan rulers of India were not slow in patronising Sanskritic Studies in their own courts

I am grateful to Mr. P. K. Gode, M.A, Curator, Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona, for permitting me to prepare a critical edition of the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī from the six manuscripts of the same belonging to his Institute. None of the MSS. is complete but all of them together go a long way towards the restoration of the whole work. It seems that in page 64 of this work some verses between vv. 260 and 261, as at present numbered by me, are really missing. Manuscripts A-D more or less supplement one another; the text of Taraṅgas I-II is reconstructed from them. Taraṅga III has been prepared from MS. E only. Taraṅga IV is found in MSS. B (up to verse 65 only) and E and Taraṅga V only in MS. F. Only the first verse of the fifth Taraṅga is found in MS. E also.

The General Index has been compiled by my pupil Mr. Jyotirmaya Datta, M.A., to whom thanks are due.

It is unfortunate that the only other extant MS. of the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī belonging to Benares Sanskrit College was not available as it could not be spared by the Librarian of the College. As, however, a correct and consistent Text could be reconstructed with the help of the six MSS. used, the necessity of the said MS. was not keenly felt.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE PADYĀMRṬA-TARAṄGĪNĪ.

A = MS No. 146 of 1875-76, belonging to Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona.

Folios 43. It contains only two taraṅgas, viz. 1 and 11. Folios 8 (containing vv. 11-12) and 10 (containing vv. 16 and 17) are missing. Size: 10×4 inches. The text of the Padyāmrṭa-taraṅgīnī is written in the middle and the commentary in the remaining part (i.e. at the top and the bottom) of the page. Lines: 4-6 of the Text and 3-6 of the commentary. Letters 16-20 in each line of the Text and 40-45 in each line of the commentary. Substance: country-made paper. Character: Nāgara. This MS. is fairly correct. There are some careless mistakes; e.g. मल्लो (f. 7 b, l. 4) for मल्ली (p. 3, l. 16), स्मेरायमन (f. 8 b, l. 4) for स्मेरायमाणे (p. 4; l. 18), etc. No date.

B = MS. No. 444 of 1884-87, belonging to Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona.

Folios 26. It consists of only the first taraṅga and part of the fourth taraṅga (up to v. 65). Pagination not continuous; folios 1-7—Taraṅga I and folios 1-9—Taraṅga 4. The verses of the Padyāmrṭa-taraṅgīnī are written in the middle and the commentary of Jayarāma in the remaining portion of each page. Size: 10×4 inches. There are usually 10 lines in each page, 3-7 of the text and 3-7 lines of the commentary as well. Letters: 35-42 in each line of the text and 40—48 in each line of the commentary. Corrupt: omissions and commissions abound. There are some careless mistakes as well; e.g. स्मेरायमान (f. 8b, 1.3) for स्मेरायमाणे (p. 4, l. 18); हरिहरिता (f. 12 b, 1. 5) for हरिहरहरिता (p. 8, l. 9); कल्पवृक्षा (f. 13b, 1. 4) for कल्पवृक्षाः (p. 9, l. 7), etc.

C=MS. No. 314 of 1884-86, belonging to Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute. Poona.

Folios 18. It consists of only the first taraṅga. The text, as in MSS. A and B, is in the middle and the commentary in the remaining part of each page. Lines: 2-6 of the text and 7-11 of the commentary. Letters 26-35; a few less in the middle of each page. Size:  $9\frac{1}{2} \times 6$  inches. Substance: Country-made paper. Character: Nāgara. Careless mistakes are not infrequent, e.g. काकदण्डः (f. 4a, l. 8) for कालदण्डः (p. 2, l. 10); कचित् (f. 5a, l. 8) for चकित्, (p. 2, l. 18), etc. No date.

D=MS. No. 459 of 1899-1915, belonging to Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona.

Folios 7. Size:  $12 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$  inches. The hand-writing, particularly in the last folio, is very bad. Text in the centre of each page and commentary in the rest of the page. Lines: 1-6 of the text and 8-13 of the commentary. Substance: country-made paper. Character: Nāgara. This MS. breaks off at v. 27 of the first taraṅga. Fairly correct.

E=MS. No. 376 of 1884-1887, belonging to Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona.

Folios 10. This manuscript begins from v. 36 of taraṅga II and continues upto v. 1 of the fifth taraṅga. Size:  $12\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$  inches. No Commentary. Lines 12 in a page. Letters: 48-52. Substance: country-made paper. Hand-writing careless. Corrupt.

F = MS. No. 250 of 1880-81, belonging to Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona.

Folios 5. Size:  $10\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ . Lines 6-10 in a page. Letters 29-31 in a line. Corrupt. For various mistakes in this MS, see pp. 64-71 of this edition. Substance: country-made papers. Character: Nāgara. This is the only MS. used that deals with the fifth taraṅga except only one verse contained in MS. F. The MS. referred to in footnotes in pp. 64-71 is, therefore, MS. F. This MS. does not contain the commentary. The date of the composition of the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī is given here as 1760 Saṃvat i.e. 1674 A.D. The date of the MS. itself is not, however, known. The MS. has a rather old look.

Biographical Sketches and Literary Activities of the Poets of the PADYĀMRṬA-TARAṄĪNĪ

INTRODUCTION

Our scope of investigation about the poets whose verses have been quoted in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī is limited to the following published anthologies:— (1) Śārṅgadhar-paddhati of Śārṅgadhara; (2) Subhāṣitāvalī of Vallabhadeva; (3) Kavindra-vacana samuccaya; (4) Sadukti-karṇāmṛta of Śrīdhara-dāsa; (5) Subhāṣita-ratnākara of Kṛṣṇaśāstrin Bhāṭavadekarar; (6) Sūkti-muktāvalī of Jalhana; (7) Padyāvalī of Rūpa Gosvāmin; (8) Padya-racanā of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa Āṅkolakara; (9) Sūkti-ratna-hāra of Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja and the following unpublished MSS.:—(1) Padya-veṇī of Veṇīdatta; (2) Sabhyālaṃkaraṇa of Govindajit; (3) Subhāṣita-hārāvalī of Hari Kavi; (4) Sūkti-sundara of Sundaradeva; (5) Rasika-jīvana of Gadādhara Bhaṭṭa; (6) Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya (Anonymous). Many rhetorical and other works have also been consulted.

As all the leading anthologies composed in the sixteenth and the seventeenth centuries A.D. have been consulted and the compilers of anthologies usually quote the well-known verses, it may be presumed that many more verses of the leading poets mentioned in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī will not be forthcoming even though some more manuscripts referring to these poets may be availed of. As many of these poets are of comparatively recent date, the scope of search for unknown verses by them is naturally limited. Therefore, it is believed that the conclusions arrived at here will not be much different from those that could have been drawn on the basis of a larger number of manuscripts. Still it is regrettable that no other anthological manuscripts than those used here could be availed of in spite of our best attempts.

Only those verses which are found in unpublished manuscripts are published in this Introduction in foot-notes.

The serial number of verses of the anthological manuscripts as given in this work are in accordance with my own arrangements. The Sabhyālaṃkaraṇa and the Subhāṣita-hārāvalī have been reshuffled altogether as parts of these works were written by the scribes more than once. The order of the verses of the Padya-veṇī and the Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya remains just the same as in the manuscripts; only the serial numbers are added by me.

AKBARIYA-KĀLIDĀSA

His date

Akbariya-Kālidāsa composed a work entitled Rāmacandra-yaśaḥ-praśasti in praise of Vaghela Rāmacandra of Rewa who was a contemporary of Akbar and ruled from 1555-1592. There are two MSS. of this work as yet known, one belonging to the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, No. 3109, Catalogue No. 8269<sup>1</sup> and the other to Bikaner Maharaja's Library.<sup>2</sup> Owing to the exigencies of the International situation, the first-mentioned MS. has been sent away from Calcutta to a safer place and is at present out of the reach of scholars and the second-mentioned MS. too could not be availed of in spite of my best attempts. It is expected that some more informations about this poet will be availed of from this work when the MSS. will be available in course of time.

From the colophon as given in the Catalogue—

इत्यकव्वरी-कालिदास-कवि-श्रीगोविन्द-भट्ट-विरचितः श्रीमहाराधिराज-राम-चन्द्र-यशःप्रबन्धः समाप्तः—

it is clear that Akbariya-Kālidāsa's real name was Govinda Bhāṭṭa. As a contemporary of Rāmacandra and Akbar, Akbariya-Kālidāsa must have flourished about 400 years ago.

1 See p. 85 of Mm. Haraprasad Shastri's Catalogue of Sans. Mss. belonging to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. IV, p. 85, Calcutta 1923.

2 See Bikaner Catalogue of Mitra, Ms. No. 522, p. 247.

His patrons

Akbariya-Kālidāsa was one of the greatest Sanskrit poets of his age. Though he had other patrons, the name of the poet itself shows that this Kālidāsa of the sixteenth century A.D. was a great favourite of Akbar. Nothing about his parentage is, however, known. He praises in his verses several kings who must have extended patronage to him in some form or other, and he avowedly acknowledges the patronage of Akbar by assuming a name after him. Thus, he refers to Gurjarendra, Jallāla, Vaghela, Dalapati, Virabhānu-putra or Rāmacandra of Rewa and Akbar. He praises the king of Gurjara as one whose fame has pervaded the whole world.<sup>1</sup> King Jallāla is referred to in a beautiful verse on the wife of his enemy.<sup>2</sup> The Vaghela king praised by Akbariya-Kālidāsa was Rāmacandra of Rewa who was responsible for sending Tānasena to the court of Akbar.<sup>3</sup> His father Virabhānu was the patron of poet Bhānukara.<sup>4</sup>

One of his verses is devoted to the praise of king Rāma for his charitable acts,<sup>1</sup> particularly the gift of elephants. The king of Kābila who is said to have invaded the country of Vaghela was repulsed by the latter in spite of the former's very strong army.<sup>2</sup> In another verse he describes the sword of the Vaghela king; to him it appears like a swarm of bees emerging out of the calyx of his hand-lotus.<sup>3</sup> In a verse in the form of a colloquy between Gaurī and Rambhā he alludes to the mighty prowess of the son of king Virabhānu i.e. king Rāmacandra of Rewah.<sup>4</sup> He praises the queen of Dalapati in one verse.<sup>5</sup> He describes Akbar as an outstanding ruler who possesses the might of a lion.<sup>1</sup> The emperor he says, is so powerful that he extirpates all his enemies instantaneously and terrifies even the king of Ceylon.<sup>2</sup> In another verse his sword is beautifully compared with various objects.<sup>3</sup> The Sūkti-sundara<sup>4</sup> preserves a verse in which the poet describes the march of the Nizam for conquest. But as both the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī<sup>5</sup> and the Padya-veṇī<sup>6</sup> attribute the verse to Bhānukara, the attribution of Sundarācārya does not seem authentic.

There are a few other verses which he presumably composed for pleasing some king or other.<sup>7</sup>

Akbariya-Kālidāsa as a poet

Akbariya-Kālidāsa was proud of his achievements as is manifest from one of his verses preserved in the Padya-venī.<sup>1</sup>

Akbarīya-Kālidāsa did not professedly belong to any particular religious sect such as Śākta or Vaiṣṇava. He pays homage to Viṣṇu, Śiva, Bhavānī and Gaṇeśa. Three of his verses are devoted to Viṣṇu (including one on Kṛṣṇa), three to Śiva, eight to Bhavānī and two to Gaṇeśa.

In a verse on goddess Durgā he prays to her for protecting him from all evils in that majestic form in which she is worshipped by Indra with the Mandāra flowers that attract a large number of bees. As they sit on the golden umbrella of the goddess, they constitute another umbrella as it were and the goddess appears like wearing two umbrellas.<sup>1</sup> In another verse he praises the umbrella of the goddess as a wonderful thing. No sooner is it seen than it enters the head.<sup>1</sup> Again, he pays homage to the goddess in her Jvālāmukhī form in two verses. Very fortunate are they, exclaims the poet, who worships the holy feet of Jvālāmukhī with bodies horripilated, eyes tearful, and heads rolling on the ground—muttering prayers in faltering accents.<sup>2</sup> Again, the poet worships her for dispelling all the gloom of his miseries by means of the shooting rays of her toes.<sup>3</sup>

He has depicted Śiva in a very pleasant as well as angry mood. In one verse he intends to deceive Pārvatī and replies accordingly to her questions regarding the identity of the person on his head. It is really the goddess Gaṅgā, traditionally, the co-wife of Pārvatī, but

Śiva tries to explain away the questions of Pārvatī.<sup>1</sup> In the verse describing Śiva in his destructive mood, he is seen with one leg lifted up for the Tāṇḍava dance and Aparṇā clinging to his body in fear; the terrible sounds of his anklets are piercing the whole world as it were.<sup>2</sup> In the third verse he describes the neck of Śiva with its dazzling bluish colour resembling various dark objects such as the waves of the Yamunā, the bed of blue lotuses, etc. and earnestly prays for getting rid of all evils.<sup>3</sup>

Gaṇeśa has been praised in two of Akbarīya-Kālidāsa's verses collected by us. In one he is found in a very happy mood, and in the other rather in a terrific

We have only four verses of Akbarīya-Kālidāsa on nature which has a permanent bearing on the sentiment of Love. These verses might as well be termed Love-verses. Unfortunately, we have only one more Love-verse of the author—a verse on a separated lady-love. Out of the four verses on nature, two are devoted to the description of summer-wind. In one the summer-winds are stated to be the elephants of king Madana who are rushing on after roaming about on the outskirts of the golden mountains in the form of the breasts of the Ladies of Kārṇāṭa, jumping in the Pampā Lake, scattering the pollens of the Mallī flowers—and followed by swarms of bees throughout.<sup>3</sup> The pleasant

In the verse devoted to moon-rise, the poet says that the evening is the time for the god of Love to proceed for the conquest of the world and accordingly, the ceremonial for the purpose is to be observed; a copper-plate, therefore, floats on the sea in the form of the setting sun and the East, too, bears on her head a pitcher in the form of the moon.<sup>1</sup>

The pursuit of a horse is beautifully described by the poet. It stretches forth its head as it intends to measure the earth and its feet are raised up as it considers the sky as nothing but a stage to dance on.<sup>2</sup>

The poet has left us to the legacy of only one Anyā-padeśa or Anyokti. It is on the lotus. There is no flower that can outdo the lotus by rivetting the attention of the bees even for a while.<sup>1</sup>

Akbarīya-Kālidāsa is indeed a great Sanskrit poet. His verses are inspiring and really enjoyable. Almost every verse has some figure of speech or other in it, such as the metaphor including the Mālārūpaka, Utprekṣā, Atīśayokti, śleṣa, and so on. Nowhere in his composition, is there any looseness. The style of Akbarīya-Kālidāsa reminds one of the excellent styles of his illustrious predecessor whose name he shares—though at a much later period. One is apt to think that his name Akbarīya-Kālidāsa is really a pen-name so designed as to please both Akbar as well as to suit his own capacity as a supposed rival of the best poet of Hindu India.

ĀŚĀ MĪŚRA

The Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī and the Padya-veṇī are the only works which quote the same verse of Āśā Mīśra.<sup>1</sup> Unfortunately, no other verse by him is known. The Subhāṣita-ratnākara notices the verse<sup>2</sup> but does not mention the name of the poet as it does not in the case of any other verse. So its silence about the authorship of the verse does not prove anything to the contrary. As the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī and the Padya-veṇī are both works of the seventeenth century A.D., the lower limit of the date of Āśā Mīśra may be easily ascertained i.e. he cannot flourish later than that date. It is not unlikely that he was a contemporary poet of Haribhāskara and Veṇīdatta, authors of the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī and the Padya-veṇī respectively.<sup>1</sup>

Some devotee says in the above verse on Bhavānī that he intends to be favoured by Pārvatī who was the cause of the immortality of Śiva in spite of his taking the deadliest poison. On the other hand, the sentiments expressed in the verse may very well be those of an ordinary householder. In that case the verse would mean: I am looking forward to that medicine growing in hills and without any leaves, taking which even a person suffering from colic pain and taking deadly poison (as a consequence) escaped death.

The merit of the verse lies in the double interpretations of the words<sup>2</sup> and particularly, in its inner significance as distinguished from its ordinary meaning.

1. Veṇīdatta is probably slightly earlier in date. Veṇīdatta's Pañca-tattva-prakaśikā was composed in 1644 A.D. whereas the PT. was composed in 1674 A.D. a.e. about thirty years later. The PV. does not quote any verse of Bhāskara or Haribhāskara. 2. See p. 82

BHĀNUKARA

It is well-known that the Moslem rulers of India were great patrons of Learning and Fine Arts. But the fact that many of them liberally patronised Sanskrit Culture and Learning as well, is not generally known. Their courts were adorned with Sanskrit scholars and writers of high repute who got every encouragement, monetary and otherwise, from their royal patrons. Unfortunately, many valuable records of their scholarly achievements are irreparably lost to us and the surviving literature also is available only in MSS. scattered all over India and outside. Fortunately, however, the literature that has outstood the cruel ravages of time is not meagre and it enables us to have a clear idea as to how in spite of linguistic and religious differences many Moslem rulers of India were prone to extend their best support to the development of Hindu Culture and Civilization. This spirit of mutual tolerance and reverence for the culture and creed of each other alone can ensure a permanent bond of friendship and collateral progress of the two principal communities of India. That is why it is essential for us to investigate into the cultural advancement of the Hindus during Moslem rule in India.

It is regrettable that nothing much about this is known. Of the Mahomedan rulers who liberally patronised Sanskrit poets and scholars, the foremost are Shahbuddin, Nizam Shah, Sher Shah, Akbar, Shah Jehan, Muddafar Shah, Malla Shah and others. Some of the poets patronised by them are Bhānukara, Akbarīya-Kālidāsa, Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja, Harinārāyaṇa Mīśra, Puṇḍarika Viṭṭhala, Amṛtadatta, Lakṣmīpati and so on. Short accounts of the lives and literary activities of these poets will be given in my Muslim Patronage to Sanskrit Learning.

Of the Sanskrit poets who enjoyed the patronage of the Moslem rulers, Bhānukara appears to be the greatest. Therefore accounts of his life and literary activities on the basis of the informations collected from his works both published and unpublished, and various anthologies containing some of his verses, etc., are of absorbing interest.

Bhānukara is the earliest of all the poets mentioned above. His wide popularity as a poet is evidenced by the Padya-veṇī of Veṇidatta, Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī of Haribhāskara, Rasika-jīvana of Gadādhara Bhaṭṭa, Sabhyālaṃkaraṇa of Govindajit, Subhāṣita-hārāvalī of Hari Kavi and Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya (anthologies not as yet published)<sup>1</sup> containing about 160 of his verses.

1 For detailed Bibliographical informations about these unpublished MSS., see Bibliography at the end of this work. The Padya-veṇī and the Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya will soon be published by me.

The Padya-racanā published in the Kāvya-mālā Series alone contains about 180 verses many of which are not found in the above six unpublished anthological works.

LIFE AND DATE

Bhānukara vs. Bhānudatta and personal history

The evidence of the anthological works is in support of the identity of Bhānukara and Bhānudatta, author of the Gīta-Gaurīśa and its ṭippaṇa, Kāvya-dīpikā, Rasa-mañjarī and its commentary as well as Rasa-taraṅgiṇī all of which are available in print and also of the Kumāra-bhārgaviya (a campū based on the Purāṇas), Alaṃkāra-tilaka and Śṛṅgāra-dīpikā which are as yet unpublished.<sup>1</sup> Quite a large number of verses quoted under the name of Bhānukara are traced in the Rasa-mañjarī,<sup>2</sup> as 'Gaṇapatiputra-Bhānukarasya' and from the last verse of the Rasamañjarī<sup>2</sup> etc. as well as from the Pañjis of Mithilā,<sup>3</sup> we come to know that Bhānudatta was the son of Gaṇapati. (4) Moreover Bhānudatta refers to Nizāma-Dharaṇipāla in verse 121 of his Rasa-mañjarī<sup>4</sup> and in the anthologies several verses ascribed to Bhānukara are devoted to the eulogies of Nizam Shah.

Thus it seems that Bhānukara is really identical with Bhānudatta. His father's name was Gaṇapati as given in the Padya-veṇī, Rasa-mañjarī as well as the Pañjis of Mithilā, etc. Unfortunately, however, nothing is known about his mother, early life etc.

Bhānūdatta himself gives his own genealogy in the Kumāra-bhārgaviya which is quite in agreement with the evidence furnished by the Pañjis of Mithilā except that in the former Viśvanātha is represented as the son of Sureśvara and Ravinātha as the grandson of Sureśvara, not his son.<sup>1</sup>

In one of his verses Bhānukara eulogises Sher Shah.<sup>2</sup> As Sher Shah ruled from 1540-1545 A.D., it is evident that Bhānukara flourished in the first half of the sixteenth century, if not a bit earlier.

Again, two verses of Bhānukara devoted to the praise of one mighty ruler Kṛṣṇa are preserved in the Padya-racanā of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa Āṅkolakara.<sup>3</sup> This Kṛṣṇa was, most probably, emperor Kṛṣṇadeva Rāya of Vijayanagara who ruled from 1509-1530 A.D.

In several verses<sup>1</sup> Bhānukara eulogises one Nizam Shah. Either of the two Nizams who were ruling in India in the first half of the sixteenth century may be referred to by Bhānukara in his verses. One was Boorhan Nizam Shah I and the other Nizam Khan, later on known as Sikander Lodi (1489-1517 A.D.). It is more likely that the former is meant as in some of the verses the Nizam is also addressed as Nizam Shah. Now, Nizam Shah was a general title of the rulers of the Nizam Shahi dynasty whose ruling period extended from 1497 A.D. to 1637 A.D. The particular Nizam Shah who was ruling during the period of Sher Shah's reign was Boorhan Nizam Shah I who ruled from 1510 to 1553 A.D. As he ruled about 43 years, probably the majority of the verses of Bhānukara referring to Nizam Shah would refer to him. The poet referring to Sher Shah as ruler (1540-45 A.D.) cannot be young in age as he professes in the same verse that he himself composed a very large number of verses by that time. Boorhan Nizam Shah already ruled for 39 years when Sher Shah was crowned king. He ruled for 13 years more after the accession of Sher Shah to the throne. Unless the poet was very long-lived, he could not probably praise any other living ruler of the Nizam Shahi dynasty except Boorhan Nizam Shah I.

1 See under the heading Patrons of Bhānukara.

In three of his verses<sup>1</sup> Bhānukara refers to one king Virabhānu who is represented as lording it over the kings of Delhi, Orissa, Bengal and Gujrat. There were several kings of the same name who ruled before the time of the poet himself<sup>2</sup> and therefore he could not refer to them as living rulers in his verses. The reference may be to king Bhānu of the Kacchapa dynasty, father of Bhagavantadāsa and grandfather of Mādhava-

III, p. 2055, etc. The Ganjam (274) and Vizagapatam inscriptions (96-97) of Virabhānu are dated Śaka 1275 (1353 A.D.) and 1298 (1376 A.D.) respectively.

siṃha and Mānasīṃha. Mādhavasīṃha as the patron of Puṇḍarika Viṭṭhala, author of the Rāga-mañjarī, has been referred to by him in his work.<sup>1</sup> The same work also mentions that Mādhavasīṃha the patron and his brother Mānasīṃha were great favourites of emperor Akbar who ruled from 1556 to 1605 A.D. So chronologically there is not much difficulty in Bhānukara's referring to the grandfather of Mādhavasīṃha, favourite of Akbar. But it is more probable that by Vīrabhānu, Bhānukara really refers to Vaghela Vīrabhānu<sup>2</sup> of Rewah (1540-1555 A.D.) who was married to Sukumāradevī and father of Rāmacandra who ruled from 1555 to 1592 A.D. and was a contemporary of Akbar. There is no chronological difficulty; again, reference to Vaghela kings in the verses of Sanskrit poets of the sixteenth century A.D. and the liberal patronage extended by

2. Imperial Gezeteer of India, vol. XXI, pp. 279ff. In a MS. of Somadeva's Kathā-sarit-Sāgara copied by Rūpaṇi who enjoyed the patronage of Bhāvasīṃha, one of the descendants of Vaghela Vīrabhānu of Rewah, the lineage of Vīrabhānu is given; vide MM. Haraprasad Shastri's Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts, vol. VII. For a further reference to Vīrabhānu of Rewah, see Pradyotana Bhattacharya's commentary Sāradāgama on Candrāloka (Kashi Sanskrit Series, No. 75). The account given here is slightly confusing.

Vaghela kings to Sanskrit scholars, confirm our conjecture.

All the above evidences lead to the conclusion that Bhānukara or Bhānudatta flourished during the first half of the sixteenth century A.D. Patrons of the poet were Kṛṣṇadeva Rāya of Vijayanagara, Virabhānu of Rewah, Nizam Shah as well as Sher Shah.

Another evidence helps the positive determination of the lower limit of the date of Bhānukara or Bhānudatta. In connection with showing that some poets wrongly use “Purataḥ” in the sense of “in front of”, Jagannātha quotes in his Rasa-Gaṅgādhara<sup>1</sup> the very first line of the Rasa-mañjarī of Bhānudatta—
 दधाति पुरतो निम्नोन्नतायां भुवि ।
 Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja, author of the Asaf-vilāsa was connected with the court of Shah Jahan who ascended the throne in 1627 A.D. Therefore, Bhānukara quoted by Jagannātha must have flourished before that date.

Patrons of Bhānukara.

Bhānukara was liberally patronised both by Hindu and Moslem rulers of his time. As we have seen, he adorned the court of king Kṛṣṇadeva Rāya of Vijayanagara, Virabhānu of Rewah, Sher Shah and Nizam

1, इदमप्यन्यत्तैरेव वाचकोपमेय-लुप्तायामुदाहरणं निरसीयत, etc., pp. 271-272 of the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara with Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa's commentary, Benares ed.

Shah. Therefore, he seems to have been wandering from place to place, from one court to the other, although we have no means of knowing the exact period of his stay in each.

He appears to have a very great respect for Nizam Shah as he devoted as many as nine verses to his eulogy. Most probably, he wrote many more verses in his praise which are now lost to us. In his verse devoted to the description of the physical charm of the Nizam<sup>1</sup>, the poet fancies that the eye of the lovely-browed one, unable to distinguish between Kāma and Nizam, approaches the ear for its help in the matter. In another,<sup>2</sup> he declares that the beautiful foot of the Nizam was made by the Creator for being placed upon the head of the wife of his enemy; the parting line of the hair, the vermilion-dust and the kundas on the head represent the foot of the Nizam with shooting rays and beautiful nails.

In one verse<sup>3</sup> he praises Nizam Shah for making magnificent gifts. In order to keep a record of his gifts, Brahmā used the Mandākinī as a piece of chalk and drew a long line on the floor of his house Puṣkara. Brahmā was on the look out for another person at least who would be Nizam's rival in the award of gifts. As he could not find out any, he put a dot by the side of that line which is nothing but the moon.

2. Padya-racanā, 16. 4

3. Padya-veṇī, MS., v. 100

In one verse<sup>1</sup> Bhānukara gives a glorious description of the march of Nizam Shah for conquest. When he marches out, the earth faints away under the pressure of, and on account of the physical torture caused by, the hoofs of horses. Therefore the sea, terribly perturbed and agitated in roaring waves, sprinkles water on her. The Lady presiding over the quarters flutters the flag, generating violent wind; and the dust-storm dashes towards the sky in order to ask the divine physician Āśvina about the remedy for recovery from swoon.

In the verse on the sword of the Nizam,<sup>2</sup> the king is highly praised for his military skill. His sword is so handled that it instantaneously kills innumerable mighty elephants of his enemies who are consequently vanquished in a moment.

In the verse devoted to the victory of the Nizam in battle,<sup>3</sup> the poet says that when the Nizam casts his angry look at his enemies, they all break atwain; even the sun high above begins to tremble and in order to save his own skin has recourse to the banner of all-conquering Nizam.

2. Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, 85; Sūkti-sundara, v. 134

3. Padya-veṇī, MS., v. 132.

In the verse on the flag of the Nizam<sup>1</sup> the poet's fancy takes a lofty flight. He assumes that the flag of the Nizam is nothing but the tongue of the earth stretched out on account of the heavy pressure of the army on the same. Similarly, in the verse on the prowess of the Nizam.<sup>2</sup> On account of the excessive heat of the king's prowess, the gold all over the universe, even of the Sumeru, melts; as a consequence, the stairs of Indra's palace situated on it fall down, even the sun sinks within the melting gold again and again and the women there are terribly terrified.

In one versre<sup>3</sup> Bhānukara describes the world-wide fame of his patron. Brahmā is engaged in making verses on the glorious deeds of the Nizam with the help of a chalk. The long syllables in the verse stand for the curved lines representing the lunar disc, the conch, the jasmine and the swan and the short ones for the lotus-stalk, the snake, the Mandākinī and the tusks of an elephant.

Unfortunately, only one verse of the poet in praise of Sher Shah is left to us.<sup>1</sup> Here, he says that it matters little to a poet of his standing who has to his credit innumerable verses if in a verse, or one half of it, the fastidious manage to find some fault or other just as it matters little to Sher Shah if out of crores of horses vying in motion with wind, some five or six happen to be lame or one-eyed.

BHĀNUKARA AS A POET*

The verses of Bhānukara collected from unpublished anthological works may be classified as follows:—

Bhānukara as a poet

That Bhānukara or Bhānucandra Mīśra was a poet of a high order can by no means be doubted; that he was very popular is manifest from the evidence furnished by the authors of the anthologies composed after the sixteenth century A.D. This extreme popularity enjoyed by him is due to his depth of thought and analytic power. He was a great rhetorician and naturally, his writing is very rich from the rhetorical point of view. He has dealt with various subjects as shown above; in almost every subject, there are beautiful verses which at once arrest our attention. Only a few are noticed below.

In his verse on the Buddha, he says that when the Buddha stood against the Vedas (Vedic rituals), the Om-kāra fled off, leaving aside its dot (bindu). Then it had come into the possession of Śiva who used it as a trident (really on the top of it) and the dot began to shine in the hand of Śrīkṛṣṇa as the disc Sudarśana.<sup>1</sup> Here the poet suggests that Śiva and Kṛṣṇa (Viṣṇu) came into prominence as gods after the wane of Buddhism in India. His picture of the earth as it was when it emerged out of the ocean and hung on the teeth of the Boar, is also interesting.<sup>2</sup>

His verses on the Nizam<sup>3</sup> are of paramount interest establishing as they do a good relationship between the poet and his patron. This, among other evidences, shows that Mahomedan patronage for Sanskrit learning was not lacking in India in the sixteenth century A.D.

In a verse on the flag of the Nizam the poet assumes that it is nothing but the tongue of the earth stretched out on account of the heavy pressure of the army on the same.<sup>1</sup> In another verse also on the king, Bhānukara's poetic fancy takes a lofty flight. The enemies of the king in heaven feel like fighting on hearing the violent blowing of the conch; they swing about their hands on the arrows in the form of the eye-brows of the divine-damsels who present themselves for embracing them.<sup>2</sup> In the verse on the march of Vīrabhānu for conquest, the poet says that the world had a crack in between on account of the sound of drums, neighing of horses and trumpeting of elephants when he started; (then) the resultant crack was removed by means of borax in the form of the Mandākinī, the moon and stars heated on the fire of the king's prowess.<sup>3</sup> The pun employed by the poet in the verse on the plight of enemies<sup>4</sup> much enhances its beauty.

The poet demonstrates the sentiment of tranquility well in one of his verses on the same. Nothing appears substantial, he says, when one looks back upon life from a very advanced stage; thus the roaming about of the past appears to be all waste of energy, acquisition of knowledge nothing but provision for wrangling about and love for women all worry due to final separation and nothing more; moreover, a man at that time wholeheartedly cares for a religious life and pines for the past part of life that appears to them almost void.<sup>1</sup> In another verse he longs for worshipping Dāmodara in a creeper bower at Benares, undisturbed by any woman.<sup>2</sup>

All the verses under sections 4-5 could well have been placed under the heading 'Love'. But as the Nāyakas or Nāyikās are the main objectives of the poet in the verses in question, they have been grouped under the headings—'Women' and 'Men'. Woman is almost synonymous with Love and therefore, it is only natural that out of a collection of 130 verses of a poet, only four verses are devoted to Men in love.

A beautiful woman at the advent of youth is a marvel and the poet says, even the god of Love on rare occasions finds the Venus influencing his fate<sup>1</sup> and only a person with Bṛhaspati in the eleventh zodiac sign can expect to dally with her.<sup>2</sup>

The eye is a predominant feature of the beauty of a woman; it is more beautiful than a lotus because when God weighs them in a balance, He is required to place Māṣas (Phaseolus Radiatus) on the scale of the lotus, the bees representing them as such.<sup>3</sup>

Again, a verse on the middle of a woman's body assigns a fine reason why the middle region is appropriately called a vacuum.<sup>4</sup>

Various types of heroines—Svakiyā, Parakiyā, etc. and their mood types such as Māninī, Kalahāntarītā, Utkā, Vipralabdhā, etc. have also been successfully depicted by the poet. A lady-love separated from the beloved as a consequence of a quarrel takes it for granted that a man is restless and a woman, on the other hand, steady and sincere and moreover, she argues, there is no reason why two youthful persons should not from time to time quarrel, but why should these wretched creatures—the bee, the Moon, and Madana—be tormenting her all along?<sup>1</sup> The pangs suffered by a separated woman eat into her vitals and she presents a really painful sight<sup>2</sup> but a lady-love longing for reunion at any cost whatsoever presents in herself a much more pitiable object; she indeed goes to any length to recover her lost love<sup>3</sup> and even a stone must melt at her solicitations.

The psychology and doings of a fallen type of woman, a lady on tryst in broad day-light or at night, etc. etc. have been nicely analysed by the poet. Fallen women care for money alone and are the very anti-thesis of love<sup>1</sup> and do not believe even in the sympathy of God for them; they simply exclaim that He has done absolutely nothing for them.<sup>2</sup> They go to the length of inciting even their daughters—in any case, those who are very much like daughters to them—to evil acts.<sup>3</sup>

The messenger-maidens engaged in love-intrigues are always very clever fellows. One of them reports to the lover that ever since he was away the unfortunate girl got rid of her garland of budding lotuses, pearl-necklace and waist-girdle but that was not all; her bracelets slipped down from her arms to the wrist as if to ascertain whether she had lost her pulse too.<sup>1</sup>

The poet has also drawn good pictures of men, as distinguished from women. Howsoever, a woman may decry that a man is insincere in love-matters, the poet shows that a man also may love to the extent of madness. Almost like a woman, he piteously bewails that he is in no way an enemy of the kunda flower, honey, bee, waves of nectar, cloud, lunar disc, and lotus, but they all have turned out hostile to him simply because she puts them all to shame by her teeth, melodious voice, sweet gaze, laughter, hair, face and breast respectively, while residing in his heart.<sup>2</sup> cooing of the cuckoos is nothing but the chanting of mantras by him and the moon is the dish he uses.<sup>1</sup>

In one of his verses on the summer Bhānukara has employed a pun very effectively.<sup>2</sup> Of much effect has been the use of a happily chosen word viz. Kanyā-rāśi in a verse of the description of the Autumn.<sup>3</sup> In his description of the Hemanta the poet strikingly attributes the husband-wife relationship to the Day and the Night, during this season. The Day offers the major portion of the sky (or the cloth) to the beloved night and himself shrinks for her satisfaction.<sup>4</sup>

Bhānudatta was the author of the Gita-Gaurīśa with the ṭippana on the same work that is a prototype of the Gīta-Govinda of Jayadeva, and had certainly some leaning towards religion. The authors of the anthologies consulted have not, however, cared to quote his verses on religious topics such as Śravaṇa, Manana, Kīrtana etc., the PT. being the only work to preserve one verse on the utterance of the holy name of Nārāyaṇa. Through a figure of speech known as prativastūpamā, the poet states that just as the digging and the levelling of the earth, etc. are useless if no seed be sown, the perusal of the holy scriptures, the Purāṇas etc. are all in vain if the sacred name of Kamalākānta be not uttered.<sup>1</sup>

The anthologies preserve a few verses of Bhānukara on the holy places, etc. In a verse on Maṇikarnikā, he suitably employs the Virodha alaṃkāra in showing how a bather in the same attains the state of Śiva<sup>2</sup> and in a

This is a good example of the figure of speech Virodha. Here the devotee means to say that he has really attained the state of Śiva on account of his bath in the Maṇikarnikā though the wording is such that the second part of each pāda may be interpreted otherwise.

verse on the Trivenī he assigns some reason in his poetic way why its water should be darkish.<sup>1</sup>

In his Anyokti on the Lion he illustrates how heredity works. No sooner is a cub born than it exhibits a tendency to jump upon the temple of an elephant even before sucking its mother's breast.<sup>2</sup> Thus, in his other Anyokti verses too he hints at some truth or other.

One outstanding feature of Bhānukara's composition is his great liking for the employment of figures of speech.<sup>3</sup> The lofty flight of his poetical fancy couched in the garb of idiomatic language reaches at times the maximum height of poetic excellence, particularly with the aid of rhetorical perfection.

BHARTṚHARI

Traditionally, Bhartṛhari's father was a Brahmin, Candragupta by name and his mother a Sūdrā called Sindhumatī. The legend that Bhartṛhari was the brother of the famous Vikramāditya is baseless just as the attempt of several scholars to identify him with the author of the Bhaṭṭi-kāvya is futile. He is generally believed to have flourished about the middle of the seventh century A.D. If Bhartṛhari is to be the composer of all the verses, many verses from the present editions of his three Śatakas, Śṛṅgāra, Vairāgya and Niti,, are to be purged out. As at present, verses from such celebrated works as the Mudrārākṣasa, Abhijñāna-Śakuntala, etc. find place in them. The names of the works undoubtedly imply that they originally consisted of 100 verses. But some of our present editions contain 110 verses, some again 116 and others still more. This in itself shows that the Śatakas in their present form cannot but be full of interpolations.

All the six verses of Bhartṛhari quoted in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī are traced in the Vairāgya-śataka.<sup>1</sup>

The anthologies quote many of his verses, but attributions in them are of doubtful authority as they vary from anthology to anthology. Whereas some of the verses attributed to him are actually found in his Subhāṣitas, many are not only not traced in them but found attributed to some other poets in other anthologies and rhetorical works.<sup>1</sup>

1. See Appendix D, pp. 102-103, vv. 287-292.

BHAṬṬA NĪLAKAṆṬHA

The PT. records only two verses to the credit of this poet.<sup>2</sup> There are several verses under the name of Nīlakaṇṭha and twenty-eight verses of Nīlakaṇṭha Śukla<sup>3</sup> in the SA. The two verses in the PT. furnishes no clue whatsoever to the identity of the poet nor have the verses been traced anywhere else. Under the circumstances, it is risky to identify Nīlakaṇṭha Bhaṭṭa with Nīlakaṇṭha or ⅓ and Nīlakaṇṭha Śukla of the SA.

There are several Nīlakaṇṭha Bhaṭṭas e.g. (1) the Smārta, son of Śaṅkara and author of the Mayūkhās; (2) the Naiyāyika, son of Rāma and author of the Tarkasamgraha-dīpikā-prakāśikā; (3) the Paurāṇika, son of

1. See Peterson's Introduction to the SSV., pp. 74-75, The SUK, also quotes 13 of his verses. The SMV. quotes six of his verses, 5 of which are found in the Śatakas and one viz. मानेनेच्छति, in the Bhallaṭa-śataka (v. 7).

2. V. 258, p. 63 and v. 20, p. 9.

3. Verses 95-99, 103, 160, 162, 168, 183, 232, 254, 296, 449, 450, 454, 462, 651, 654, 664-665, 667-669, 687-688, 753, 781 (verse number as arranged by myself).

Raṅganātha and author of the Devī-bhāgavata-sthiti and the Tilaka, commentary on the Devī-purāṇa, and so on. But as none of them is reputed to be proficient in making verses, they are to be ignored from the point of view of identification with the present author. As a poet and dramatist, however, Nīlakaṇṭha, author of the Kāvya-llāsa<sup>1</sup> and the Kalyāṇa-saugandhika,<sup>2</sup> deserves mention for this purpose, no doubt; but Nīlakaṇṭha is so popular a name and the two verses quoted in the PT. too are so very ordinary that no identification of the author in question seems possible.

In verse no. 20 of PT. the poet prays that he may be solely devoted to Rāmacandra heart and soul, the mere name of Rāmacandra on his lips counting for nothing much. One Śuka (parrot), in spite of wings, with the name of Rāma on lips, is confined in the cage; the other Śuka (Śukadeva), devoted to Rāmacandra, is united with the supreme soul. In the other verse (no. 258) of Nīlakaṇṭha, quoted in PT.—the poet shows that resemblance in appearance counts for nothing; man is similar in this respect to the monkey, the horse to the donkey and so on; still they are poles asunder from the point of view of qualities.

BHERĪBHĀNKĀRA

As some of the verses of this poet have been quoted by Jalhaṇa who flourished in Kashmir in the thirteenth century A.D., Bherībhāṅkāra must have been either a contemporary of Jalhaṇa or flourished earlier than him. Most probably, he flourished earlier. From one of his verses quoted in the Sūktimuktāvalī,<sup>1</sup> it appears that he lived in Benares for some part of his life at least. Presumably, he was a devotee of Śiva. Jalhaṇa quotes in his section on Hara-stuti five consecutive verses of Bherībhāṅkāra.<sup>2</sup>

Of the verses of Bherībhāṅkāra so far traced, one is devoted to the eulogy of a king, two to Anyoktis—one on Cuckoo<sup>3</sup> and the other on Lion,<sup>4</sup> four to the praise of Gaṇeśa,<sup>5</sup> and one to the a part and parcel of the worship of Śiva. His residence at Benares might also be due to his devotion to Śiva. Only a single verse by him is devoted to the eulogy of Jīmūtavāhana.<sup>1</sup>

Bherībhāṅkāra's style is forceful and the description of the Tāṇḍava dance of Śiva<sup>2</sup> and similar other topics is replete with appropriate vigour and depth of thought. The principal sentiment in his composition is Tranquillity (Śānta). In one verse the poet laments for wasting much valuable time in rendering service to kings; the ever-merciful God has been kind to him; no doubt; still he pities himself for not having utilized properly the early part of his life.<sup>3</sup> Bherībhāṅkāra is really a religious poet and as such, believes in holy places. He is of opinion that Vedic learning is in itself no good; it proves useful only then when the Vedic Scholars realise that their Vedic learning is quite insignificant and begin, as a consequence, to dwell on the banks of the holy Ganges.<sup>4</sup> Again, he says, one need not be disappointed either for committing sin or feel proud for the performance of religious deeds; the confluence of the Ganges and the Jumna comes to the rescue of both.<sup>1</sup>

It is only unfortunate that no complete work by this poet is known to exist; a complete work by him called “Bheribhāṅkāriya-kāvya” is, however, known in name only.<sup>2</sup> Thus, his name is perpetuated to-day only through the quotations of his verses in anthologies. Bheribhāṅkāra does not seem to be the real name of the poet; probably, it is his pen-name.

BILVAMAṄGALA, ALSO CALLED KṚṢṆALĪLĀŚUKA

Kṛṣṇalīlāśuka, also called Līlāśuka, alias Bilvamaṅgala, was the son of Nībī and Dāmodara. Īśānadeva was, probably, his spiritual preceptor.<sup>3</sup>

Bilvamaṅgala is, probably, the title of the head of the Natuvile Maṭha of Trichur and as such, three Bilvamaṅgalas are as yet known. The founder of the Maṭha is, probably, identical with our poet Līlāśuka. As is natural with a spiritual Head, his real life is shrouded in mystery. One Cintāmaṇi is reported to have been his concubine through whose intervention his life changed altogether from a passionate to a religious one.

Of all the works of Bilvamaṅgala, the Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmrṭa is the most well-known one. It has undergone various editions in various characters, 4 editions in Telugu, one in Telugu and Kanarese, 1 in Grantha and Tamil and the rest, ten in number, in Nāgara character.

Suppositious Works :—

9. Govindābhiṣeka.

Durgāprasāda Yati in his commentary upon this work says about Kṛṣṇalilāśuka :—

श्रीपद्मपाद-मुनिवर्य-विनेय-वर्ग-श्रीभूषणं मुनिरसौ कवि-सार्वभौमः ।

 तच्छेष-पूर्तिं च पुनर्विधाय विवृत्यमहे उत्तर-भागमेतम् ॥

The Govindābhiṣeka consists of 8 cantos and its supplement by Durgāprasāda of 4 cantos. Bilvamaṅgala's work is devoted to the illustrations of the sūtras of the Prakrit Grammar. This grammarian Bilvamaṅgala is, in any case, identical with the commentator of Bhoja's Sarasvatī-kaṇṭhābharṇa.<sup>1</sup> It is difficult to say whether this Bilvamaṅgala the grammarian is the same as our Lilāśuka.

15. Brndāvana-stuti.
16. Kāla-vadha.
17. Puruṣakāra (ed. in Trivandrum Sanskrit Series).

Of the anthological works consulted, the Sabhyā-lamkarāṇa consists of only two verses of Bilvamaṅgala, the Śārṅgadhara-paddhati three and the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī six. Some of these verses are found in more than one anthological work (see p. xxii—Introduction). None of these verses is, however, found in the original part of the Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta, viz. the first Āśvāsa. मातर्नातः etc. i.e. PT. 35 is found in the South Indian version of the Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta.<sup>1</sup>

All the verses of Bilvamaṅgala so far traced have a great religious fervour. They are all sincere outbursts of a very devoted heart. In v. 35 of this work, he regrets for his previous attempts to please people with his composition; now he sincerely endeavours to devote his poetic talent to the praise of Mother Sarasvatī.

Kṛṣṇa's jocular conversation with Candrāvati who retorts him outright in the same strain as he does—he calling her Rādhā and she calling him Kāṁsa—is quite amusing.<sup>2</sup> His deceitful conversation with Rādhā as found in v. 16 of this work breathes forth the effusion of a devoted heart and exhibits the skill of the poet in the employment of puns. Kṛṣṇa avoids each and every issue by the employment of a word having more than one sense.<sup>1</sup>

CANDRACŪḌA

ii. dwelling-house

Vāsaḥ : i. Scent

ii. „ „

Yāminyāmuṣitaḥ : i. Yāminyām ii. Yāminyā muṣitaḥ uṣitaḥ

Vāsaḥ ( neuter ) means garments, and Vāsaḥ ( masc. ) means dwelling-house and scent. The Nom. singular of Vāsa, whether neuter or masc., is Vāsaḥ.

2. As such, he is to be distinguished from the celebrated Smārta of the same name, son of Umāpati (Umana Bhaṭṭa and grandson of Dharmēśvara).

3. Aufrecht in his Cat. Cat. mentions that the work was published in the Kāvya-mālā. This is wrong.

6. Weber's Verzeichniss der Sanskrit und Prakrit Handschriften der Königl. Bibliothek in Berlin, p. 229.

SSV., SUK., SMV., KVS. and PAV. contains any of his verses. The SS. quotes seven, the PV. two, the SSS., one and the PT. two verses under his name.<sup>1</sup> The PT. also quotes two verses from his Anyokti-kaṇṭhābharaṇa<sup>2</sup> and two from his Prastāva-cintāmaṇi.<sup>3</sup>

Candraśekhara quoted in the PT. and PV. (see p. xxii) may be identical with Candracūḍa.

In v. 44 of the PT. the poet praises Yamunā as the sanctifier of impure things which may subsequently find place in heaven whereas in v. 267, the name of Hari is declared as the most efficacious object; it is invaluable, at the same time so easily obtainable.

CANDRAKAVI

One of the MSS. of the PT. gives the name of the poet as Candraka. But as the ŚP. (v. 769, p. 119) quotes the identical verse and gives the name of the poet as Candrakavi, this name is chosen. The name Candraka is found in the ŚP. and also quoted by Kṣemendra in his Aucitya-vicāra-carcā and also in the Kavi-kaṇṭhābharaṇa of the same (4. 1, 5. 1), printed in the Kāvya-mālā. The Rāja-taraṅgiṇī (2. 16) knows a playwright of the same name who flourished during the reign of Tuṅjīna. Even though Candra or Candraka

1. See Introduction, p. xxii under Candracūḍa.

2. viz. 232 and 239.

3. viz. 155 and 49.

be not identical, he flourished certainly before the 14th century A.D. when the ŚP. was composed.

In the verse quoted in the PT. (195) which is an Anyokti on the cloud, it is enjoined either to pour water or to allow the moon to shine.

CANDRAŚEKHARA

There is no proof to show that this Candraśekhara is identical with Candracūḍa. There are several poets of the above name;<sup>1</sup> in the present stage of our knowledge, it is difficult to identify our Candraśekhara with any of them. The PT. quotes only one verse of Candraśekhara in which the dancing of Śiva is admired by the devout poet.

DEVAGAṆA

Our MS. B. gives the name of this poet as Devagaṇadeva.<sup>2</sup> This poet is, probably, identical with the poet of the same name, ten of whose verses are quoted in ŚP.<sup>1</sup> In the present stage of our knowledge nothing more about Devagaṇadeva is known.

DHARAṆĪDHARA

The verses of Dharaṇīdhara have been quoted in the KVS., SUK., SS. as well as PT. (see Intro., p. xxiii). One of our MSS. gives his name as Dharaṇīdhara Bhaṭṭa as well. As his verse has been quoted in the KVS., he must have flourished earlier than 1,000 A.D.

The India Office Library possesses a MS. of a work called Rasavatī-śataka by an author of the same name.<sup>2</sup>

GADĀDHARA

Only one verse of this poet has been quoted in the PT. (v. 118). The name of Gadādhara is also found in the Sad-ukti-karṇāmṛta, Subhāṣita-hārāvali and Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya (p. xxiii). As Gadādhara, author of the Rasikajīvana, flourished in the middle of the 17th century, he cannot be identical with the poet of the same name quoted in the Sad-ukti-karṇāmṛta of Śrīdharadāsa who flourished several centuries earlier. Gadādharas quoted in the later anthologies may refer to the same poet.

2. MS. No. 2079. For the interpretation of the verse quoted in the PT. see References and Notes, p. 87.

GAṆAPATI

The verses of a poet of the above name have been quoted in the SSV. as well as SUK. (see pp. xxiii-xxiv) but this poet must be distinguished from our Gaṇapati who seems to be identical with Bhānukara's father. The PV. quotes one verse attributed to both Gaṇapati and Bhānukara (v. 665) and another verse (v. 789), attributed to Bhānukara, son of Gaṇapati. Again there is one verse, अलङ्कित-कुचाभोगं, etc. which is attributed to Gaṇapati in the PV. (v. 540) and to Bhānukara in the SV. (v. 713) and SSS. (v. 113). All the later anthologies quote Gaṇapati's verses, thus establishing beyond doubt that Bhānukara as well as his father were poets of repute.

In one of the verses preserved in the Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya,<sup>1</sup> Gaṇapati addresses poet Lolimba as follows:—

भो लोलिम्बकवे<sup>2</sup> कुरु प्रणमनं किं स्थीयते स्थाणुवत्
 कस्मै कामनृपाल-बाल-शशिने नायं शशी वर्तते ।
 किन्तु व्योम्नि विभाति रौप्या-रचितं चन्द्र-द्युतेर्वाजिनः
 पाद-क्लाणमिदं पदाद्विगलितं तत्सौम्य जानीमहे ॥

1. SSS. 196

2. Probably, same as Lolambarāja, son of Divākara and descendant of Sūrya Paṇḍita. Lolambarāja or Lolimbarāja was the author of the Hara-vilāsa (published in the Kāvya-mālā, Part xi, pp. 94-133; see also Tanjore Catalogue, vi. 2814) and the Sundara-Dāmodara not published

This is really a different version of the text:—

भो लोलिम्बरराज(?)कुरु प्रणमनं किं स्थायते स्थाणुवत्
 कस्मै भोजनृपाल-बालशशिने नायं शशी वर्तते ।
 किं तद् व्योम्नि विभाति चास्त-समये चन्द्र-द्युतेर्वाजिनः
 पाद-त्राणमिदं जवाद्विगलितं तत्सौम्य जानीमहे ॥

This second version indicates that the author of the verse was a contemporary of king Bhoja and as such, this version cannot naturally be the composition of our Gaṇapati. If at all, this verse was composed by his namesake who flourished several centuries earlier than him and some of whose verses are preserved in the earlier anthologies.<sup>1</sup>

In one verse he praises very highly one Gaṇeśvara Kavi.<sup>1</sup> Gaṇeśvara and Gaṇapati are identical in sense and one naturally wonders if this verse really refers to the poet himself.

Gaṇapati whose verses have been quoted in the SUK., SMV., and SSV. cannot be the same as Bhānuas yet (for MS., see Catalogue of MSS. in Adyar Library, II. 16). His Āyurvedic works, viz. Vaidya-jīvana, Vaidyā-vataṃśa, etc. deserve unconditional praise for lucidity of style and exhaustive treatment of the subjects concerned in a condensed form.

karā's father Gaṇapati whose verses have been quoted in the later anthologies. In pp. xxiii-xxiv of the Introduction, the former verses have inadvertently been entered under the name of Gaṇapati, poet of the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī. Bhānukara, as we have seen before, flourished in the first-half of the sixteenth century and his father flourished a bit earlier whereas the SUK.<sup>1</sup> was composed in 1205 A.D., the SMV.<sup>2</sup> in the 13th century

Gaṇapati as a poet

The verses of Gaṇapati that are preserved in anthological works may be classified under the following heads:—

I. Gods

- 1 Śiva: PT. 19 = PV. 19<sup>2</sup>

II. The King

- 1 The sword of the king: PT. 88
2 The fame of the king: PV. 89 = SS. 95

Jalhaṇa gives his own lineage as follows, in the Introductory part of his work:—

1. Vandyaghāṭīya Sarvānanda quotes the Subhāṣitāvali of Vallabhadeva in 1160 A.D. in his commentary on the Amara-koṣa. The present edition of Peterson, however, betrays interpolations.

Gaṇapati belonged to a family which could boast of a succession of leading Sanskrit scholars. In the Padyāmrṭa-taraṅgiṇī, the verses of Gaṇapati's uncle (or father?) Śaṃkara Miśra, Gaṇapati himself and his son Bhānukara or Bhānudatta have been quoted. The father was not as great a poet as the son; still, his verses are worth-preserving as is evident from the anthologies.

GAUḌA

This Bengalee poet must have flourished during the reign of king Mukundadeva, last king of Orissa as he praises him as an excellent fighter. Mukundadeva was defeated and killed in Hijri 975 i.e. 1567 A.D. Therefore, this Sanskrit poet of Bengal must have flourished at that time. The verse कर-चारिरुहेण, etc. quoted in the PT. (v. 100) has been quoted in the SS. as well (v. 159; see p. xxiv of the Introd.)

The Padyāvalī of Rūpa Gosvāmin whose literary activities lay between 1495 A.D.—1550 A.D. quotes also a verse of a Gauḍīya poet (see p. xxiv).

GOVINDARĀJA

Śārṅgadharma in the chapter devoted to the praise of Great Poets quotes a verse of Deveśvara in praise of Govindarāja (v. 181).<sup>1</sup> Śārṅgadharma also quotes a few verses of Govindarāja in his paddhati.<sup>2</sup> That he was a very popular poet is also evidenced by the Subhāṣitāvalī and Sūkti-muktāvalī which quote some of his verses and by the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī which quotes only one verse.<sup>3</sup> It is unfortunate that this great poet should in course of time pale into insignificance.<sup>4</sup>

GUṆĀKARA

One of the verses of Guṇākara quoted in the ŚP. (no. 3914) has been quoted by Govindajit in his SA. (v. 172) and the SSS. Śārṅgadharma quotes seven other

HARIBHĀSKARA, OR BHĀSKARA, ALSO CALLED HARI.

Personal History

Haribhāskara, known in short as Bhāskara, was the son of Āpājinanda, at times also called Ājāji Bhaṭṭa, son of Haribhaṭṭa and grandson of Puruṣottama Bhaṭṭa of Benares.<sup>2</sup> He belonged to the Kāśyapa gotra.<sup>3</sup> The ancestors of Haribhāskara were all very pious persons.<sup>4</sup> Haribhāskara's father was, probably, a physician by profession.<sup>4</sup>

Haribhāskara's son Jayarāma was also a learned man. He wrote a commentary on his father's PT. called the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī-sopāna, some extracts from which are given in the present edition. Jayarāma quotes at times his father's opinions, particularly from some of his works which are not otherwise known to us. As will be evidenced by the extracts, this commentary is very helpful for the right understanding of the verses quoted in the PT.; but for this, the first few of the verses of the Rāja-taraṅga of the PT. and bearing upon the Mīmāṃsā, the Nyāya and the Sanskrit Grammar would have remained quite unintelligible to many.

1. The Sad-ukti-karṇāmṛta quotes a verse of one Guṇākarabhadra (V. 65. 4, हरिश्चर्या-चुरणोपान्ताः etc.)

The patron of our poet was Yasavanta, abbreviated as Jasvanta,<sup>1</sup> in whose honour he composed a poetical work called Jasvanta-Bhāskara.<sup>2</sup> Several verses from this work have been quoted in the PT.<sup>3</sup> There is another work of the same name on Dharma which deals with the rites that are to be performed throughout the year.<sup>4</sup> It is clear from this work on Dharma that this Jasavanta Singh was the son of Indramaṇi and ruled over some part of Bundelkhand.<sup>5</sup> He is also highly praised in v. 109 of the PT. Our poet also praises king Rāma Rāja or Rāmacandra in verses 45 and 64 of the PT. and also Dhīra-siṃha in another (PT.59). This Rāma Rāja is probably identical with the king of Satara, Rāma Raja I, who died of small-pox at Jinji and whose infant son Siewa was crowned king under the guardianship of Rāmacandra Paṇḍita and the regency of his mother Tārābāi. Dhīrasimha is, probably, one of the members of the Royal family of Bundelkhand or Satara.

This Bhāskara must be distinguished from the poet of the same name mentioned in the earlier anthological works such as the Subhāṣitāvalī<sup>1</sup> and Sūkti-muktāvalī<sup>2</sup> and from Bhāskaradeva mentioned in the Sad-ukti-karṇāmṛta.<sup>3</sup>

Date

Fortunately, three of the works of Haribhāskara are dated and therefore, no doubt as to the exact date of Haribhāskara remains. From this it is evident that Bhāskara flourished in the latter half of the seventeenth century A.D. and his literary activity continued at least from 1673. A.D. which is the date of the composition of the PT.<sup>4</sup> to 1695 A.D.

when the Śuddhi-prakāśa of the poet was composed.<sup>1</sup> The other dated work of the poet was the commentary called the Setu on the Vṛtta-ratnākara of Kedāra-bhaṭṭa which was also composed at Benares in 1676, three years later than the PT.<sup>2</sup>

The PT. refers to the poet's Gaṅgā-stuti, Jasvanta-Bhāskara as well as the Bhāskara-carita and therefore, there is no doubt that these works were composed a few years earlier than 1673 A.D. probably by 1670 A.D. Even though he be twenty years old at that time, Haribhāskara must have been born about 1650 A.D.

We come to know of the following works of Haribhāskara, none of which has as yet been published:—

Poetical Works:—

This work is, probably, to be distinguished from the work of the same name by the same author on Dharma. Several verses have been quoted from this work in the PT.<sup>2</sup>

There may be some doubt as to the genuine authorship of the verses ascribed to Bhāskara in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī. But it is quite in keeping with the habit of the authors of *koṣa-kāvya*s to mention their own names in stead of stating ममैतत्, ममैतौ, etc. The latter practice is, of course, more usual; but the former also is not unknown. Moreover, the verses quoted by the compiler from his own works such as the Gaṅgā-stuti, Lakṣmī-stuti, Bhāskara-caritra and Javanta-bhāskara show that Haribhāskara was not a bad poet and there is no reason why we should doubt as to his capacity in composing the verses attributed to "Bhāskara" in the PT. Again, there are cases in the PT. where one MS. attributes the verses to Bhāskara (e.g. एतौ भास्करस्य, p. 23) whereas another MS. refers us to a particular work of the poet Haribhāskara (see f.n. एतौ मत-कृत-भास्कर-चरितात् ). All these lead to the conclusion that the verses in question were really composed by nobody else than our poet Haribhāskara.

Bhāskara's verses classified

Two verses of Bhāskara have been quoted in the Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya (vv. 805-806); both of them are found in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī (vv. 120-121). Our knowledge about the poetical activities of Haribhāskara is at present limited to the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī containing in particular as it does a few verses from some other works of the poet. So a classification of the verses of our poet is really a replica of the contents of the PT., excluding as it does only a few subjects on which he does not write at all.

This long list of subjects at once shows that Haribhāskara compiled the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī not only for collecting chosen verses on various subjects but also for incorporating his own contribution to those topics as far as possible. It is clear from the verses of Haribhāskara that he had a very facile pen; his style is simple. The alliterations he employs are in no way forced and are, therefore, very apt and striking. The puns, too, are quite charmingly employed.<sup>1</sup>

Haribhāskara's thoughts are not lofty. He is lacking in high-soaring poetic imagination; the imaginations he resorts to are all stereotyped. A few verses, however, deserve notice. In v. 36 of this work on the description of the Trivenī, the poet imagines that the Ganges and the Yamunā, proud on account of their power to rescue the dead bodies fallen into them, are engaged in quarrels, threatening each other with their hand-like waves. The red water of the Sarasvatī remains in between them and happens to be their target as it were. In v. 37 (on the Ganges), the poet wonders why the Ganges should remain on Śiva's head and Durgā by his side. Both of them are born of Himālaya; again, Durgā practised austere penances in her girlhood; still, why should the Ganges get so much preference as to reside on the head of Śiva? In v. 40, the poet finds a solution: but for the nectarine water of the Ganges, Śiva would have been compelled to breathe his last on account of his taking virulent poison.

HARIBHAṬṬA, TAILAṄGA

The verses of one Haribhaṭṭa have been quoted in the SSV. (nos. 245, 269, 536, 2160, 2936, 2937 and 3369). Two verses assigned to one Haribhaṭṭa are found in the Padyāvalī of Rūpagosvāmin (nos. 328 and 335). These verses are not found in the earlier anthologies.

The verse of Haribhaṭṭa quoted in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī (v. 246) is quoted in the PV. as well (v. 720) but is not traced anywhere else.<sup>1</sup> We have no evidence in support of the identification of our Haribhaṭṭa with his namesakes of the earlier anthologies.<sup>2</sup> These three Haribhaṭṭas may or may not be identical.

One Haribhaṭṭa is known to us as the commentator of the Nalodaya.<sup>3</sup> Caturbhuja who wrote the Rasa-kalpa-druma at the instance of Shayasta Khan in Sam. 1745 i.e. 1689 A.D.<sup>4</sup> in 1000 verses divided into 65 prastāvas mentions the name of one

bhaṭṭa must have flourished earlier than 1689 A.D.
And therefore, if our poet Haribhaṭṭa may be identified with this Haribhaṭṭa, he must have flourished before this date.

JAGANNĀTHA PAṆḌITARĀJA

Court-poet of Shah Jahan (1628-1658) and great favourite of Dara Shikoh (d. 1659).

Personal history

Jagannātha was the son of Perubhaṭṭa<sup>1</sup> or Perama-bhaṭṭa<sup>2</sup> and Lakṣmī of the village Mungundu in the Godāvārī district. He was a Tailaṅga brahmin<sup>3</sup> of the Veginada community.<sup>4</sup>

He was very fortunate in his training as a student, his father himself being the teacher. His father in his turn was the disciple of Jñānendra Bhikṣu in Vedānta, of Mahendra in Nyāya and Vaiśeṣika, of Khaṇḍadeva

In commenting upon Lakṣmī, Nāgeśa says, “लक्ष्मीति तत्-पत्नी-नाम ।” in Pūrva-mīmāṃsā and Śeṣavīreśvara in the Mahābhāṣya.<sup>1</sup> Śeṣavīreśvara taught Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja as well.

It is said that Jagannātha started a school at Jaipur. He as well as other Paṇḍitas of Jaipur were once challenged by a Kāzī to an open debate in matters concerning Islam. It was only Jagannātha who took up the challenge, studied the religious literature of the Moslems as much and as quickly as he could within the fixed date and defeated the Kāzī. This creditable performance had such a telling effect upon the ruler of Delhi that he at once invited Jagannātha to his court. Jagannātha accepted the same and a fresh chapter in his life's history began.

There is a tradition that he fell violently in love with a Muslim girl called Lavaṅgī whom he married. Probably, he was unmarried when he came to the court of the ruler of Delhi.<sup>2</sup> That he was much enamoured of this Muslim girl is evidenced by several verses attributed to him.<sup>1</sup>

Probably Jagannātha had a son by Lavaṅgī whose loss he mourns in one of the verses of the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara.<sup>2</sup> Jagannātha, probably, first came to Delhi during the rule of Jehangir to whom he refers in a verse of the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara.<sup>3</sup>

Jagannātha himself states in the introductory part of his Āsaf-vilāsa that he got his title Paṇḍitarāja from emperor Shah Jehan. His work on Āsaf-khān, counsellor of Shah Jehan and brother of Nūrjāhān, manifestly shows his reverence for him and also for Rāya

The full name of Jehangir was Nuruddin Muhammad Jehangir.

Mukunda of Kashmir at whose instance he composed the same. The verse attributed to Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja declaring that only two Īśvaras or Lords, either the Lord of Delhi or of the Universe, are to be approached for help, the rest being simply worthless from the point of view of real patronage,<sup>1</sup> would, probably, refer to Shah Jahan during whose reign he passed the longest period of his life at the court of Delhi.

In some MSS. of his work Jagad-ābharāṇa, there is a reference to his enjoyment of the patronage of Dara Shikoh (see below: under the works of Jagannātha—Jagadābharāṇa). Moreover, Dara Shikoh was murdered in 1659, only one year after the imprisonment of his father Shah Jahan.

The tradition is that Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja left the court of Delhi in sheer disgust after the murder of Dara Shikoh and came to Benares where he was severely reprimanded by Appayya Dikṣita apparently for marrying a Muslim girl. This was, most probably, only retaliating for Jagannātha's severe criticism of his work Citra-mīmāṃsā in the Citra-mīmāṃsā-khaṇḍana. Jagannātha, however, took the insult so terribly to heart that he is said to have committed suicide along with his beloved Lavaṅgī in the holy water of the Ganges. There is a tradition that the Gaṅgā-Laharī of Jagannātha was composed for this purpose; as he stepped down and down, he recited one after another the 53 verses of this stotra after which he and Lavaṅgī were drowned.

But this incident must have taken place not immediately after his leaving the court of Delhi. He says in the Śānta-vilāsa, part IV of the Bhāminī-vilāsa, v. 32, that after leaving Delhi, he resided at Muttra.<sup>1</sup>

The third canto of the Bhāminī-vilāsa, viz. the Karuṇa, apparently appears to have been composed after the demise of Jagannātha's partner in life. But really if the Karuṇa-vilāsa as a part of the Bhāminī-vilāsa were composed with the express intention of having ready illustrations for the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara as Nāgeśa says,<sup>2</sup> no personal loss need be taken into consideration with regard to the composition of the verses. Moreover, as there is no evidence whatsoever that Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja married a second time, the above supposition distinctly goes against the tradition that he and Lavaṅgi died together in the holy waters of the Ganges.

Date.

The Rasa-Gaṅgādhara contains a verse<sup>1</sup> which refers to Nurdin. Nurdin is really the forename of Nurdin Mahammad Jahangir, father of Shah Jahan. Most probably our poet came to the court of Delhi when Jahangir was the ruler. Internal evidence shows that Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja enjoyed the full confidence and liberal patronage of Shah Jahan.<sup>2</sup> If 'Jagat' of the work Introductory part of the Āsaf-vilāsa.

Again, the word 'दिल्ली-वल्लभ' in v. 32 of the Śānta-vilāsa, Part IV of the Bhāmīnī-vilāsa, most probably, refers to Shah Jahan.

Jagadābharaṇa may be taken to refer to Dara Shikoh as some MSS. show, Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja may be supposed to have continued to enjoy the patronage of the Mughal Raj till the murder of the eldest son of Shah Jahan. Therefore, our poet appears to have enjoyed the patronage of two Mughal emperors and one Mughal prince. It is only likely that Jagannātha was born in the second half of the sixteenth century and continued to contribute to Sanskrit literature till the murder of the unfortunate Mughal prince Dara Shikoh (1659 A.D.) as a court-poet of Delhi. Subsequently to his leaving the Royal court he resided at Muttra and compiled the Bhāminī-vilāsa and necessarily the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara, if the word 'kāvyā' in v. 6 of this work really refers to the Bhāminī-vilāsa as Nāgeśa says it does.

Other evidences also help the determination of the date of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja. Our poet is connected with the celebrated School of Grammarians headed by Bhaṭṭoji Dikṣita. His exact relationship is best seen in the following table:—

Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa flourished towards the end of the 17th century and therefore the date assigned by us to Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja who flourished two generations earlier must be about 50 years earlier still.

In the Kula-prabandha composed in the seventeenth century, which is now included in the Vamśa-vīthi of the Sāhitya-vaibhava of Bhaṭṭa Mathurānātha Śāstrin (Bhaṭṭa Garden, Residency Road, Jaipur, Rajputana), it is stated that one Nārāyaṇa who was a student of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja succumbed to death at an early life in the seventeenth century.<sup>3</sup> This also helps the exact

1. Bhaṭṭoji's disciple Nilakaṇṭha Śukla composed a work in 1635 A.D.

2. There is a tradition that Hari-Dīkṣita challenged Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja in debate in which our poet first defeated his opponent but later on was himself defeated.

3. लब्धा विद्या निखिलाः पण्डितराजजगन्नाथात् । determination of the date of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja irrespective of the above evidences.

Again, the Subhāṣita-hārāvalī of Hari Kavi preserves a verse of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja in which he praises one Gaṅgādhara.<sup>1</sup> Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa refers to one Gaṅgādhara as his guru in his commentary on the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara.<sup>2</sup> It may be that these two Gaṅgādharas were identical in which case Gaṅgādhara must have taught Nāgeśa in his old age.

It may further be added that the commentary of Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa on Rasa-Gaṅgādhara was composed by the beginning of the eighteenth century. Jagannātha himself severely criticised Appayya Dikṣita as a slavish imitator of earlier rhetoricians. Appayya was probably alive up till the end of the first quarter of the seventeenth century and was, in any case, a senior contemporary of Jagannātha. Haribhāskara, whose Vṛtta-ratnākara-ṭīkā<sup>3</sup> was composed in 1676 A.D. includes in his Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī two verses of Jagannātha. The Padyāmṛta-

The Lakṣmī-laharī of Jagannātha seems to refer to the same poet by means of pun on गङ्गाधर in v. 3—“धरास्तं गायन्ति स्फुरित-तनु गंगाधर-मुखाः ।”

2. नत्वा गङ्गाधरं मर्म-प्रकाशं तनुते गुरुम् ; the opening line of the commentary.

taraṅgiṇī is dated at 1674 A.D.<sup>1</sup> and was composed only fifteen years after the murder of Dara Shikoh.

From the above evidences we may come to the conclusion that the period of Jagannātha's literary activities continued from the beginning of the seventeenth century up to about 1660 A.D.

Works of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja.

A survey of the writings of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja at once shows that he wrote on various subjects—(1) Stotras such as those of Viṣṇu, Lakṣmī, Gaṅgā and Yamunā; (2) Panegyrics of Prāṇanārāyaṇa of Kāmarūpa, Jagat-siṃha or Dara Shikoh and Āsaf; (3) Nature, e.g. the sun-rise (see Sudhā-laharī below); (4) Sanskrit Grammar such as Prauḍha-manoramā-kuca-mardini; (5) Sanskrit rhetorical literature, e.g. the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara, a commentary on the Kāvya-prakāśa and Citra-mīmāṃsā-khaṇḍana. Again, the Bhāminī-vilāsa which was composed for the purpose of having ready illustrations for the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara is a monumental work. It contains, among many lyrical stanzas, a large number of Anyoktis which have been amply quoted by the Koṣa-kāras in their anthologies.

Some accounts of the extant works of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja are given below.

1. See p. 72 of my edition of the Padyāmr̥ta-taraṅgiṇī.

1. Amṛta-laharī.

This hymn of the Yamunā<sup>1</sup> in only eleven verses is meant for daily recitation during the bath.<sup>2</sup> Here the poet earnestly desires to pass his days on the banks of the Yamunā as a mendicant (v. 3) and prays to Kṛṣṇa for salvation.

2. Āsaf-vilāsa.

This work is devoted to the praise of Nawab Āsaf Khan, brother of Nur Jahan and minister of Shah Jahan. It is being published for the first time as an Appendix to this work.<sup>3</sup> As Āsaf Khan died in 1641 A.D. as is recorded in the chronogram Zibe afsos Āsaf Khan, this work must have been composed before that date; and after the accession of Shah Jahan to the throne in 1628 A.D., as he is described as “Sārvabhauma” in the work itself.

The work deals with Shah Jahan’s visit to Kashmir and Āsaf Khan’s whole-hearted endeavour to promote royal happiness. No historical account about Shah Jahan or Āsaf Khan is found in it.

3. Bhāminī-vilāsa, also called Paṇḍitarāja-śataka.<sup>1</sup>

The work consists of four vilāsas, viz. Prastāvika-vilāsa, Śṛṅgāra-vilāsa, Karuṇa-vilāsa and Śānta-vilāsa. Whereas in some editions the total number of verses found are 129, 183, 19 and 45 in the four vilāsas respectively, in others, again, there are 101, 102, 19 and 32 or 33 verses. This great discrepancy in the number of verses in a comparatively recent book is, no doubt, puzzling. It shows, however, that the work enjoys great popularity. In all, 121 verses are left out in several editions. Out of these about 100 are found in the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara; and therefore, there is no doubt that these 100 verses were composed by Jagannātha himself though it may be doubted whether the author himself selected them for inclusion in his Bhāminī-vilāsa. The remaining 21 verses also bear the distinctive stamp of Jagannātha's poetic excellence and are, most probably, his own.

Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa in his commentary on the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara says that the Bhāminī-vilāsa was composed Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja says that he compiled the Bhāminī-vilāsa as a selection of his verses in order that nobody else could claim them as his own.<sup>2</sup> But a comparative study of his Bhāminī-vilāsa with the Bhāva-śataka<sup>3</sup> of Rudra Nyāyapañcānana or the Anyokti muktālatā<sup>4</sup> of Śambhu Mahākavi reveals that Jagannātha was indebted to both of them for his thought and imagery of a good many verses. Śambhu Mahākavi was the court-poet of king Harṣa of Kashmir (1088-1100 A.D.) and flourished towards the close of the twelfth century A.D. And Rudra Nyāyapañcānana, son of Kāśinātha Vidyānivāsa of Bengal and brother of Viśvānātha Pañcānana Bhaṭṭācārya, flourished in the second half of the sixteenth century and continued his literary activities during the first half of the seventeenth century.<sup>1</sup> His Bhāva-śataka was composed at the instance of Bhāvasiṃha, son of Mānasiṃha.<sup>2</sup>

The Prastāvika-vilāsa is really a collection of Anyoktis. This vilāsa is also found printed under the title Anyokty-ullāsa with Malayalam metrical version by M. N. Rāmakṛṣṇa Śāstrin.<sup>3</sup>

The Anyoktis here are all grand in conception as well as expression. The Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī which was composed a few years after the death of our poet Jagannātha quotes a few of these Anyoktis, viz. verses 1, 5, 7 and 14 of the Prastāvika-vilāsa.<sup>4</sup> The first one dwells upon the majesty of the great who justly terrify the rivals, take pity for those who are meek and humble and do not cause any harm to the lowliest. In verse no. 5 the poet establishes that a respectable person must not be dishonoured. In the next verse the poet resorts to the figure of speech Śleṣa for bringing out the fact that a poor man must not feel discontented or be despaired; love and appreciation of others' merits are sure

4. Citra-mimāṃsā-khaṇḍana.<sup>1</sup>

Our poet expressly states that the defects of the Citra-mimāṃsā of Appayya Dikṣita thoroughly dealt with in the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara are collected in an abbreviated form in this work.<sup>2</sup> Appayya Dikṣita, another outstandingly great Sanskrit scholar of the South, was a sworn enemy of our poet and was responsible for his unnatural death. Unfortunately the Citra-mimāṃsā as well as the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara are both incomplete; no definite reasons for which can be assigned at the present state of our knowledge.

5. Gāṅgā-laharī,<sup>1</sup> also called Pīyūṣa-laharī<sup>2</sup> and Gāṅgāmṛta-laharī.

Several editors call Sadāśiva's commentary on the Gāṅgā-laharī, as Pīyūṣa-laharī. The India Office Library possesses 45 editions of this work, but none is a critical one. This important work badly needs a critical edition. The Gāṅgā-laharī of Jagannātha is a very sincere outburst of the feelings of a real devotee in 52 stanzas. The poet here remarks with child-like simplicity that he cares little for other goddess as he feels sure of her affection for him; if she now becomes careless about him, who else would come to his rescue, who else would care to console him?<sup>3</sup> Her holy water must put an end to his cycle of births.<sup>4</sup>

6. Jagad-ābharāṇa.

From the introduction of Durgāprasāda to the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara, it is known that he came across a MS. of the Jagadābharāṇa which had the readings Dara or some epithets such as दिह्नीधरावल्लभ referring to him instead of प्राणनारायण. So it is certain that a MS. of the poet's प्राणाभरण, in that form was found devoted to the praise of Dara Shikoh. The late Mr. S. M. Paranjape, however, says in his edition of the Bhāminī-vilāsa that he came across a MS. of the Jagadābharāṇa which had the concluding verse and the colophon as follows:—

Jagatsimha, son of Karṇasimha, was the Raṇā of Udaipur and reigned from 1628-1654 A.D. Chronologically, there is no difficulty in the poet's composing the work in praise of Dara Shikoh or Jagatsimha; and as it was he, who praised दिल्लीश्वर as जगदीश्वर,<sup>1</sup> one cannot be sure to whose praise the work was really devoted by the poet himself.

7. Karuṇā-laharī, also called Viṣṇu-laharī.

verses and is outstandingly lyrical throughout. The poet, as is clear from his other writings as well, was most religiously minded and in this hymn he declares that he cares for nothing else than the Lord.<sup>1</sup> A child falling into a pit is saved even by a passerby; the poet fallen into the sea must be saved by the father, the Lord.<sup>2</sup> The mind of the poet, a cakora in quest of moon-beams, is terribly scorched by the wild fire of the forest of Universe; the face-moon of the Lord must now save it by the award of what it so badly needs.<sup>3</sup>

9. Lakṣmī-laharī.<sup>1</sup>

The Lakṣmī-laharī consists of 41 verses in Śikharinī metre and is a hymn of the goddess Lakṣmī. The poet prays to her for removing all his sins and for her kindness to him. He considers it superfluous that in a hand that is matchless in fragrance as well as tenderness adored by by all poets, a lotus should bloom again; it is from this that the well-known figure of speech Simile of the kāvya originated.<sup>2</sup> The necklace of the goddess that represents the assemblage of all the beauties in the world and puts to an end all the troubles of the devotees should find out the means of the poet's salvation.<sup>3</sup>

11. Prāṇābharāṇa.<sup>1</sup>

The poet composed this panegyric in 53 verses for expressing his heart-felt delight on hearing the verses of Prāṇanārāyaṇa, king of Kāmarūpa.<sup>2</sup> He highly praises Prāṇanārāyaṇa for his vast learning, particularly in verses 16 and 50. There is a tippana on this work composed by the poet himself for bringing out the rhetorical excellence of each verse. Every stanza is designed to be an excellent example of one or more rhetorical figures of speech. Grand indeed is the verse (no. 52) containing a pun on the word 'Vāmā' and the adjectives are so used that they may be interpreted both with reference to the enemies of the king as well as his wife. By means of a pun on the word 'Arjuna'<sup>4</sup> the poet

The MS. of the Prāṇābharāṇa belonging to the Tanjore Sarasvati Mahal Library (no. 3828) gives the name of the poet's father as Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa and has the reading 'Kamalādhīpasya' instead of 'Kamatādhīpasya' in verse 53. Again, at the end of this MS. there is a long prose passage which is not found in the printed edition.

12. Rasa-Gaṅgādhara.

Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja was not only a great poet but also one of the best rhetoricians India has ever produced. The Rasa-Gaṅgādhara of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja is one of the best rhetorical works of India from every point of view, viz., clarity of expression, superb judgment, depth of insight, wide range of learning and so on. All the examples of the work are Jagannātha's own composition.

Unfortunately the work is available in an incomplete form, breaking off in the middle of the Uttara alaṃkāra. No definite reason for its incompleteness is known. His Citra-mīmāṃsā-khaṇḍana shows that it was composed after the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara and one would naturally think that Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja really completed the work, though the remaining portion of it is not available to-day even in MS. form. Or, it may be that in his anxiety to oppose vehemently his greatest rival Appayya Dikṣita, he really undertook the work °khaṇḍana even before the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara was completed. The tradition that the learned scholar courted death along with his wife Lavaṅgī owing to the deliberate insult meted out by Appayya Dikṣita probably furnishes a clue as to why both the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara and Citra-mimāṃsā-khaṇḍana are found incomplete.

13. Sudhā-laharī.<sup>1</sup>

The Sudhā-laharī presents a grand description of sunrise in 30 verses in the metre Sragdharā. The Sun rising in the East from the Udayagiri causes immense delight to all—particularly, to the lotus. It is the best healer of all diseases and inspirer to all devotees. Its rays, shooting through trees and falling on the earth, appear to young parrots like sticks and they, therefore, try to put their legs on them; the dew-drops on leaves, mixed with them, resemble the pomegranate-seeds in order to eat which they open their beaks.<sup>2</sup> The Sun is the son of 14. Yamunā-varṇana, a prose work.

No complete MS. of it is as yet traced. Only two quotations from it are preserved for us in the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara.<sup>4</sup>

Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja flourished at a time when even the vernacular poets were excessively fond of introducing alliteration in composition. Several Hindī verses of Vihārin and Sanskrit verses of Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja are very much alike in style as well as thought.<sup>5</sup>

There are traces of the influence of his age upon Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja; e.g. it was customary among aristocrats during Mughal rule to maintain a couple of pigeons. There is a verse in the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara which refers to a pair of these love-birds.<sup>1</sup>

Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja is undoubtedly one of the greatest rhetoricians in Sanskrit, if not the very greatest. If he could have completed the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara, he would have undoubtedly eclipsed the glory of all the rhetoricians of India. It is only unfortunate that such an outstanding personality should have faced such a sad end of life. He was a great poet as well as a good prose-writer. It may be taken for granted that his Kāvya-prakāśa-ṭīkā bears the same stamp of rhetorical perfection as the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara does. It is a great pity that such an important work should still be known in name only. We implore to the authorities of the Raghunath Temple Library, Kashmir and Jammu, to undertake the publication of this work at the earliest opportunity. It may also be presumed that the work of our Paṇḍitarāja on Sanskrit Grammar, the Monoramā-kuca-mardana, would be also a work of outstanding merit. Trained in the same school as that of Bhaṭṭoji Dīkṣita and probably, his contemporary too—in any case, a direct disciple of Vīreśvara, son of Śeśakṛṣṇa, Bhaṭṭoji's guru—Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja was eminently fitted for the work. Jagannātha's panegyrics of the then kings of India and hymns on various deities are also quite up to the standard of the author of the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara.

JAYADEVA

Only two verses are attributed to Jayadeva in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī (vv. 124 and 219). But both the verses are attributed to other poets in other anthologies. Verse 124 is ascribed to Rāmakavi in the Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya (v. 802) and is anonymous in the Subhāṣita-hārāvalī (v. 1769) and verse 219 is attributed to Bhojadeva in the Śāringadhara-paddhati as well as Sūkti-muktāvalī. Thus, the authority of the PT. is strongly challenged with regard to the authenticity of the attribution of the two verses in question.

Even if there be some truth in the attribution of PT., the poet in question cannot be Jayadeva, son of Bhojadeva and author of the well-known Gītagovinda ; if at all, Jayadeva, son of Mahādeva and author of the Candrāloka and Prasanna-Rāghava may be referred to. The verses in question are not, however, found in these two works.

KṚṢṆA MIŚRA

Kṛṣṇa Miśra's verses have been quoted in all the leading anthologies<sup>1</sup> and the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī quotes only two of his verses. Both of them are traced in the Prabodha-candrodaya<sup>2</sup> which was composed for the purpose of inducing an unwilling student to philosophical studies. Kṛṣṇa Miśra was an ardent follower of Śaṅkara and seriously took up the cause of propagating the doctrines of the same. In the Prabodha-candrodaya, too, he has attempted to carry out his own mission.

It is known from the work itself that the Prabodha-candrodaya was for the first time staged for celebrating the conquest of Kīrtivarmana and his general Gopāla over Kaṇhadeva. Kīrtivarman was a Candela king who ruled between 1049 and 1100 and vanquished his enemy about 1065 A.D.<sup>3</sup> Kaṇhadeva ruled over Cedi from 1040-1070 A.D. He and king Bhīma of Guzrat defeated Bhoja of Dhārā about 1053 A.D.<sup>1</sup> From these dates, it is evident that Kṛṣṇa Mīśra flourished in the second half of the eleventh century A.D.

The following evidence also corroborates the assignation of this date to our poet. The word Kṛṣṇa in the following verse in praise of Candraśekhara Sarasvatī, the 47th pontifical head of the Kāmakoti Pīṭha (1097-1165 A.D.), seems to refer to Kṛṣṇa Mīśra; if so, Maṅkha and Candraśekhara become contemporaries of our poet:—

हेमाचार्यमपि व्यपाकृत गिरा वागष्टक-व्याकृतम्<sup>3</sup> ॥

The characters in the Prabodha-candrodaya are all abstract qualities. Here Error, a vicious king, is represented as the ruler of Benares. His advisers are all sorts of Faults and Vices. They banish Religion and the noble king Reason. In course of time the latter, however, win over the former, and the supremacy of Religion is established.

3. Puṇya-śloka-maṅjarī, 20; N.K. Venkatesa's Śaṅkarā-chārya and his Kamakothi Peetha, Kumbakonam, 28.

This important work has been commented upon by a large number of well-known scholars such as Appayya Dīkṣita, Ghanaśyāma, etc. Of these, Rāmadāsa flourished before 1545 A.D.,<sup>1</sup> and Śadātmamuni before 1571 A.D.<sup>2</sup> Kṛṣṇa Miśra, author of the Vīra-vijaya Īhāmṛga,<sup>3</sup> is likely to be identical with our poet. But as even no description of the MS. of the work is available, nothing more than a mere guess is possible at the present stage of our knowledge.

Kṛṣṇa Miśra's verses, quoted in the earlier anthologies, are mostly traced in the Prabodha-candrodaya; e.g. SMV.v. 19, p. 440=PC. IV 21; SMV.v. 3, p. 443=PC. IV. 91; SMV.v. 11, p. 307=PC. The following verses are not, however traced:—इदमपट्ट, etc.=ŚP. 875; SMV. v. 39, p. 126; उद्योगिन् पुरुष, etc.=ŚP. 455; मुक्ताभा नृ-कपाल°=ŚP. 106=SMV.v. 53, p. 25; वयमिह परितुष्टाः, etc.=SUK. v. 64. 4, p. 320. This confirms that the literary activities of a genius like Kṛṣṇa Miśra were not limited to the composition of the Prabodha-candrodaya only.

Of the verses not traced, the verse ŚP. 106, devoted to the Ganges, is a beautiful one. The drops of the water of the Ganges, scattered around on account of constant movement during the Tāṇḍava dance of Śiva, fall upon human skulls (worn as garland), his matted locks and fiery eyes as well. Consequently, they now resemble the pearls on oyster-shells, the Jasmīnes on Mallī creepers and parched rice respectively. SUK. v. 64. 4 teaches a moral. Contentment is the cause of happiness; poverty or wealth does not matter in the least, with regard to real happiness. ŚP. is an anyokti on Śuka; real merit counts for nothing to bad people or to those who are not connoisseurs of the subjects concerned.

LAKṢMAṆA BHATṬA.

It may be said at the outset that poet Lakṣmaṇa mentioned in the Sūkti-muktāvalī of Jalhana and the Subhāṣitāvalī of Vallabhadeva flourished much earlier than Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa, author of the Padya-racanā. The Padya-racanā is the source of most of the verses of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa quoted in the Subhāṣita-hārāvalī, Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya, Sūkti-sundara, Sabhyālaṃkaraṇa, Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, etc. (See pp. xxvii-xxviii). Only six verses of Lakṣmaṇa quoted in these works cannot be traced to their sources, viz. तारका-विमल०=SSS. 190; मरुतो हन्त, etc.=SA. 609; रोरित्येतद०=PT. 47; सरोरुहाम्भोरुह०=SA. 446; स्फुरत्तुरग०=PV. 157 and स्मेरायमाण-वदन०=SSS. 834=SA. 196.

Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa, quoting the verses of Akbarīya-Kālidāsa in his Padya-racanā, does not flourish earlier than the sixteenth century A.D.<sup>1</sup> Lakṣmaṇa's verses have been quoted in the anthologies composed in the seventeenth century A.D.<sup>2</sup> Therefore, he must have flourished by or before that time.

Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa, commentator of the Naiṣadha-carita,<sup>3</sup> and of the Gīta-govinda,<sup>4</sup> is probably identical with our poet. He also appears to have composed, in collaboration with Vidyādhara, a work called एवमत्र ग्रन्थे श्रीशाहमहाराजे उचिताः सर्वेऽलंकाराः सभेद-लक्ष्मण-लक्ष्यं

प्रतिपादिताः । These two MSS. have not as yet been published.

This Lakṣmaṇa does not seem to be identical with our poet as nowhere in the large number of verses of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa collected by us is there any reference to king Shahji.

Lakṣmaṇa quotes in the PR. the verses of one Veṇīdatta, son of Bhogin. Veṇīdatta, author of the Padya-veṇī, was the son of Jagajjīvana. Therefore, these two Veṇīdattas cannot be identical provided Bhogin be not an alternative name of Jagajjīvana. The verses of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa may be classified as follows:—

Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa as a poet

Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa has a graceful style and a high-soaring imagination. Thus, addressing a king, the poet says that his fame is nothing but mercury which, being heated on the flames of the king's prowess, gushes out and gets stuck to the sky in the form of stars.<sup>1</sup>

Again, his fame is the supreme mistress of the three worlds as it were, sporting as it does in the Milk-Ocean, washing its feet with nectar, making the lunar beams its clothes, anointing its body with sandal paste, dancing at sweet will on the head of Ananta and sleeping on the moon.<sup>1</sup>

The rainy-season is out for conquering the world. for it is evidently sent for that purpose by Kāmadeva. Again, the poet presumes that the enveloping of the moon by the cloud at that time is indicative of eating curd and the plentiful Durvā-grasses growing then, of the symbolic auspiciousness during its start.<sup>2</sup> Our poet thinks, the rumbling sound of clouds is nothing but the piteous cry of the lunar and solar discs as well as the stars devoured by the clouds from within the stomachs of the same.<sup>3</sup> Again he fancies that the reverberating sound of clouds is nothing but the trumpetting of Kāmadeva as to the punishment of an angry woman forthwith if she persists in her wrath any longer.<sup>1</sup>

The fire-flies are nothing but sparkles of the fire of lightning shooting out on account of the collision between the cloud and the sky.<sup>2</sup>

Again, our poet is not lacking in sly humour. Thus in a verse he opines that the cow-herdesses had better play hide and seek without Kṛṣṇa; for, if he once hides himself in Tulasī leaves, he cannot be found out as the Tulasī leaves and Kṛṣṇa are of the same colour.<sup>3</sup>

The Anyoktis of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa are fine. The lotus-leaf, born though it is of muddy water, is itself very pure and is not stained in the least by it.<sup>4</sup>

Women in love have been beautifully portrayed by the poet. A woman in her blossoming youth, Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa is an adept in the employment of the figures of speech. Thus, describing how the king obtained Fortune by churning the Battle-sea with the elephant-rod, the poet furnishes us with a good example of the Metaphor.<sup>2</sup> Our poet declares the moon to be the lion of the sky-forest, the umbrella of king Kāmadeva, the play-ball of the damsels presiding over horizons, etc. and thus gives us a fine instance of the Mālā-rūpaka (or a series of Metaphors).<sup>3</sup> The description of the morning-breeze, lying within the breast-garments of a Cola-damsel, shaking the hair of Kerala-ladies, feeling inclined to embrace the beautiful brows of the women

MAṆḌANA KAVI

The name of Maṇḍana Kavi is not found in any other anthology than the PT. Kielhorn notices in his Catalogue of Sanskrit MSS. existing in the Central Provinces, Nagpur, 1874, one grammatical work called Upasarga-maṇḍana by Maṇḍana Kavi. No other work by him is known. The PT. quotes only a single verse by Maṇḍana Kavi (No. 99). Until further evidence is forthcoming, the upper limit of his date cannot be fixed; but the lower limit of his date cannot be later than 1662 A.D. when the PT. was composed.

The verse deals with a matter-of-fact description of an archer; the beauty of the verse, however, lies in its employment of the figure of speech Śleṣa.<sup>2</sup>

MŪRTA KAVI

No further trace of this poet is available in any other work than the anthologies and that is also limited

Whatever, be the name of the poet, as the verse has been quoted in the ŚP. it must have been composed by the fourteenth century A.D. if not earlier.

PADMĀVATĪ

Detailed account of the life and literary activities of this poetess has been given in my Sanskrit Poetesses, Part I, pp. xxiii-xxix.

PṚTHVĪDHARA ĀCĀRYA

Only one verse of this poet has been quoted by Haribhāskara in the PT.<sup>2</sup> Our poet Pṛthvīdhara is, probably, identical with the author of the Bhuvaneśvarī-stotra,<sup>3</sup> Laghu-saptaśatī-stotra<sup>4</sup> and Sarasvatī-stotra.<sup>5</sup> One Śambhunātha was his Guru. There is no evidence to establish the identity of Pṛthvīdhara Bhaṭṭa mentioned in the ŚP. and SSV. with our poet. The SMV. quotes three verses of Pṛthvīdhara Ācārya; and, therefore, the poet must have flourished before the date of the composition of the SMV. i.e. the 13th century A.D.

Pṛthvīdhara pays homage to Sarasvatī in his verse quoted in the PT.<sup>1</sup> He prays to her for allowing him the pleasure of real wisdom, derived from the mere utterance of her holy name. Her self is constituted of the three parts into which the fundamental Mantra is divisible.<sup>2</sup>

In one verse he pays his homage to the river Godāvarī for her holy waters; the sun shines, says the poet, for touching her with his rays and the waters of all other rivers are holy, because the sanctified rays of the sun touch them. The Godāvarī is simply incomparable.<sup>3</sup> He also depicts the picture of a woman separated from her beloved in one verse.<sup>4</sup> In his Anyokti on the cobra,<sup>5</sup> the serpent is advised to expand its hood only so far as would befit it; it must not transgress its proper limit; if it does,

RĀMACANDRA BHATṬA OF AYODHYĀ

In v. 13 of the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, the name of the poet is given as Ayodhyākā Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa. One verse of Rāmacandra has also been quoted in the PV. in which the poet highly praises his patron Vīrasimha.<sup>1</sup> The same poet wrote his Rādhā-carita at his instance.<sup>2</sup> From the Kṛṣṇa-kautūhala-kāvya<sup>3</sup> it is known that one Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa, younger brother of Vallabha Ācārya, son of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa, born about 1484 A.D. in Kankaravada in the Telinga country, composed the work in 1520 A.D. From the concluding verse and the colophon of the Rasika-rañjana and its commentary,<sup>4</sup> we come to know that these were composed by Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa, son of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa, in Ayodhyā in the year 1524 A.D. Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa, son of Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa, also composed the Gopāla-līlā-kāvya.<sup>1</sup>

From the details given above, it is found that Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa, though a southerner, was patronised by Vīrasimha of Ayodhyā, and as the poet expressly refers to Ayodhyā and Vīrasimha in the works mentioned above, it may be concluded that all these works are by the same author. Again, Vīrasimha, son of Madhukar Shah and grandson of Pratāparudra ruled at the time when the books dated above were composed. So there is no chronological difficulty at all. Vīrasimhadeva's son Candrabhānu was the patron of Ananta Paṇḍita who composed his commentary Vyāṅgyārtha-kaumudī on the Rasamañjarī of Bhānucandra in 1685 A.D.<sup>2</sup> Supposing that Candrabhānu was a senior contemporary of Ananta Paṇḍita, the date appended to the Vyāṅgyārtha-kaumudī by the author himself also fits in well with the date of Vīrasimhadeva, father of Candrabhānu.

So there is no doubt that Ayodhyāka Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa quoted in the PT. and Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa of the PV. referring to Vīrasimha in his verse are identical and also that the same poet was the author of the Rasika-rañjana, Kṛṣṇa-kautūhala-kāvya and Gopāla-kāvya. The two verses of the poet on Romāvalī quoted in the SHV.<sup>1</sup> are probably quoted from the Romāvalī-śataka ascribed to him.

The total number of verses of Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa collected from various anthologies is 20. The verses may be classified as follows:—

1. Incarnations of Viṣṇu:—

the same as a drinking vessel later on.<sup>1</sup> The poet also pays homage to the Lord Buddha for his bold stand against killing any animal and for his advocacy of the doctrine of mercy. The Buddha was not opposed to the Vedas; on the other hand, he, possessed of true knowledge as he was, acted as a true follower of the Vedas when he stated that non-violence was the highest religion.<sup>2</sup> The other verses of the poet on the Incarnations of Viṣṇu also exhibit his great religious fervour. As his verses on Seven Incarnations of Viṣṇu have been traced, it may reasonably be assumed that he wrote on the remaining three<sup>3</sup> as well. Presumably, he wrote a Daśāvatāra-stotra either as a separate hymn or as a part of a complete work such as his Gopāla-līlā-kāvya.<sup>1</sup> That he was religiously minded is seen from his complete works on Gopāla, Rādhā, etc.

In his verse on the eulogy of King Vīrasimha,<sup>2</sup> the poet has exhibited a striking ingenuity. He says that the King and his enemy are in all respects just the same except that only the first letter of each adjective is to be dropped with regard to his enemy. Thus, the king is Vaikunṭhābhaḥ prakamām and his enemy as Kunṭhābhaḥ prakamām;<sup>3</sup> again, the king is Kamala-yuta-śīrāḥ while his enemy Mala-yuta-śīrāḥ<sup>4</sup> and so on.<sup>5</sup> And consequently, the contrast between Vīrasimha and his enemy is brought out simultaneously and exhibited graphically. This is a marvellous verse.

3. i. e. the king resembles Kṛṣṇa whereas his enemy is devoid of any glow.

4. i. e. the king's head is adorned with lotuses whereas that of his enemy is defiled.

5. The king is Kuñjarākṛṣṭa-dṛṣṭiḥ i.e. the attention of the king is always directed to the elephant for hunting

The verse on the prowess of the king<sup>1</sup> is slightly indelicate but the pun in it enhances the beauty of the verse. The poet in two other verses preserved in the Sūkti-sundara<sup>2</sup> praises the king starting for conquest. In one he fancies that the fire emerging out of the nether-regions after the breaking atwain of the earth would have destroyed the whole world, if the torrential tears of the wives of his enemies did not extinguish the same forthwith. In the other, the poet fancies that on account of the majestic marching of the king, the earth bends low; she tries to cover as it were the two breasts that are nothing but the Eastern and Western Ghats by means of the rolling skirts in the form of waves resounding like the beating of drums.

excursions, war-purposes, etc. whereas the enemy has defective eyesight on account of old age. The king is kodaṇḍo-dāra-nāmā i.e. is well-known as an archer whereas his enemy is notoriously vicious. Vīrasimha has innumerable attendants whereas those of his enemies are limited. The former is celebrated throughout the world while the latter is like a dog. The former is attached to the beautiful ladies whereas the latter is attached only to the cave i.e. is compelled to reside in caves. The king conquers his equals in fight whereas his enemy courts death. The king is well-clad and well-fed while his enemy lives on particles of food-stuff.

1. PT, 94.

2. Verses 151 and 152.

The verse of Rāmacandra Bhaṭṭa on the Sīmanta-tilaka<sup>1</sup> is identical in sense with Padmāvatī's verse Kastūrī-tilakaṃ tasyāḥ, etc.<sup>2</sup>

In his verse on the rainy-season, he humorously says that whatever be the difficulties of all others in ascertaining whether it is day or night—so cloudy the sky becomes—even during the day-time, Kṛṣṇa has a means of escape from this trouble; he touches again and again his navel-lotus and ascertains for himself.<sup>3</sup>

Thus we find that amongst the verses of Rāmacandra, some are grand. The excellence of some from this rhetorical point of view also is quite manifest. The utprekṣās of Rāmacandra are indeed refreshing and befit a first-class poet.

SADĀŚIVA

The Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī quotes a single verse of Sadāśiva which is also found in the PV. and SHV. The SSS. quotes four verses of Sadāśiva, only one of which is not traced anywhere else. The PV. quotes eleven verses of Sadāśiva, eight of which are not found anywhere else.<sup>1</sup>

Sadāśiva was rather a popular poet. As the anthologies quoting him cannot be dated earlier than the sixteenth century A.D., it is likely that he flourished about that time or a bit earlier. The Padya-veṇī is indeed a grand compilation and the inclusion of eleven verses of Sadāśiva in it means a great appreciation by Veṇidatta, its compiler, of the merits of our poet.

Sadāśiva's ideas are at times quite novel. Thus, he says that whatever others may say about the breasts of a beautiful woman, they are neither the temples of an young elephant nor twin lotuses nor a couple of golden pitchers, but are really two drums (Dundubhis) placed with their heads downwards by Kāmadeva after his conquest of the three worlds.<sup>1</sup> A woman swinging on a hammock is aptly compared by him with a garland of golden Campakas whirling round the trunk of an elephant.<sup>2</sup>

His poetic fancy takes a lofty flight in his description of moon-beams which resemble very many things in different places.<sup>3</sup>

ŚAMKARĀCĀRYA

The Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī quotes only one verse of the great philosopher-poet Śaṃkara. It is culled from his Ānanda-laharī. As Śaṃkara is an outstandingly great personality, a very large number of works passes under his name. It is high time that a serious attempt should be made for investigating into the real nature of the attributions. At times it becomes really impossible to come to a definite conclusion about the authorship of many works attributed to him. Volume IV of our India Office Library Catalogue of Sanskrit and Prakrit Books will bring to light many striking facts regarding the works of Śaṃkara.

ŚAMKARA MIŚRA

As the verses of both Gaṇapati and Bhānudatta or Bhānukara, father and son, have been quoted in the Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, it is only likely that our poet Śaṃkara Miśra would be identical with the grand-father (according to the Pañjī of Mithilā, elder brother of the grand-father) of Bhānukara. The surname Miśra, in any case, shows that he flourished in Mithilā.

Śaṃkara Miśra addresses one King Darpanārāyaṇa in a verse on the March of the king for conquest for training his horses how to cross the river caused by the tears of the wives of his enemies (PV. 112). Darpanārāyaṇa was the name of King Nṛsiṃha or Narasiṃha of Mithilā whose son Dhīra-siṃha alias Rūpanārāyaṇa or Hṛdayanārāyaṇa got a MS. of the Setu-darpaṇī of Śrīnivāsa, a commentary on the Setu-bandha, copied in 1438 A.D. As there is no doubt that Śaṃkara Miśra was a Maithila poet and flourished about this time, the king referred to in the verse is, probably, the same as king Nṛsiṃha of Mithilā, son of Harasiṃha, second in the list of successors of Viśvāsadevī, wife of Padmasiṃha.<sup>1</sup>

If this Śaṃkara Miśra be really identical with the grandfather of Bhānudatta, the great philosopher Śaṃkara Miśra is to be recognized as a poet as well.<sup>2</sup> He was also a contemporary of Darpanārāyaṇa, and flourished in the fifteenth century A.D.

The Padya-veṇī quotes nine verses of Śaṃkara Miśra; two of these are found in the Sūkti-sundara as well. The PT. quotes only two verses of which one is found nowhere else.<sup>3</sup>

1. For an account of Narasiṃha, see my ed. of Gaṅgā-vākyāvalī, pp. 118-119 of Appendices.

2. In his work Vaiśeṣika-sūtro-paskāra, he quotes from the works of his uncle Jīvanātha Miśra, Vallabhācārya, Śrīdhara Ācārya as well as Vācaspati Miśra.

Describing the fame of a king, certainly his patron Darpanārāyaṇa, our poet says that on account of the rise of the moon of fame, even the musk, hair, blue garments and jewels have become white ; darkness has been dispelled and the dare-devil spirit of gazelle-eyed women for going on tryst has totally disappeared.<sup>2</sup>

Again, he declares that those poets who compare the prowess of the king with the sun are no good because the sun plunges into the sea but the prowess not only crosses it but returns over the same also.<sup>1</sup>

The descriptions of the features of a woman are also very beautiful. The face is nothing but a novel moon arisen on a golden creeper. This moon is not spit out of the mouth of gods, nor crushed by Rāhu with his teeth, nor spotted, nor is it overpowered by the sun nor does it disappear on the new moon nor is it vanquished by the face of any woman.<sup>2</sup> The poet compares the eyes and teeth of the girl with a series of things quite aptly and strikingly. Thus the poet first fancies if the eyes are really two wagtails come from far to the lunar disc ; or, if they are really two blue lotuses that have just blossomed or two cakoras grown restless on account of their contact with the lunar disc ; ultimately, he comes to the conclusion that they are really the eyes of a beautiful damsel trained in the art of the Śafari fish.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the poet cannot at first recognise the things he sees before him ; he wonders at first whether they are really a series of jewels tinged with vermillion or two rows of the seeds of a ripe and cracked pomegranate or a garland of kunda flowers strewn with great effort by the gardener Kāmadeva ; ultimately, however, he comes to the conclusion that they are really the two rows of the teeth of the beautiful woman in question maddening young hearts.<sup>2</sup>

The Anyoktis of Śaṃkara Miśra are quite appealing. The Jasmine, says the poet, must not repudiate the bee as it has shunned the company of many new creepers for its sake.<sup>2</sup> Again, a necklace is the best of all things having strings within (or possessing qualifications) ; though it dallies with a woman, its roundness (purity of character) and brilliance (brightness) are never jeopardised.<sup>3</sup>

ṢĀNMĀSIKA

Two verses under the name of this poet have been quoted in the Padyāvalī of Rūpagosvāmin.<sup>4</sup> These verses are, however, found in the earlier anthologies as well under different names (see foot-notes). So the attribution of the PĀ. is questionable. But as the name Ṣaṇmāsika is found in the PĀ., Ṣaṇmāsika must be a contemporary or a predecessor of Rūpagosvāmin. The period of Rūpa's literary activities falls from 1495 to 1549 A. D. and presumably, Ṣaṇmāsika flourished before 1495 A. D.

Only four verses of Ṣaṇmāsika are traced and no more verses by him seems to be extant. Only one verse (Padyāvalī 194) is on Rādhā on tryst and the remaining three are on separation of the lady-love from the lover ( PT. 168=SA. 763 ; PĀ. 336<sup>1</sup> ; PT. 167=PV. 484=SA. 762 ).

In the first verse Rādhā is advised, while going on tryst, to be cautious on her way ; her teeth are very white and dispel gloom and therefore, she must not mutter even.<sup>2</sup> In another verse (Padyāvalī 336), Rādhā laments for her beloved piteously, praying for her own death but never forgetting to pray for the

ŚĀRṆGADHARA

Of the two verses assigned to Śārṅgadhara in one anthology, viz. 209 and 249, the former is found anonymous in the printed ed. of the ŚP. (no. 838); presumably, Haribhāskara used some MS. of the ŚP. which read the name of the poet otherwise and ascribed the verse to the compiler of the work. The latter is found assigned to Śārṅgadhara in the ŚP. ed. by Peterson.

Śārṅgadhara, son of Dāmodara, compiled his Paddhati about 1360 A.D. Śārṅgadhara was the grandson of Rāghavadeva, Rājaguru of the Cauhān king Hammīra.

Family-tree of Śārṅgadhara<sup>1</sup>

Śārṅgadhara was a great devotee of Śiva. He was a good poet. He compiled his great work in which he included his own verses as well as those of other poets : —

He cherished, and with justification, great hopes about his work :—

The above long list of subjects dealt with by Śārṅgadhara at once reveals that Śārṅgadhara was conversant with various subjects, literary, medical, zoological, philosophical, etc. The mention of the Sūkti-sahasra,<sup>1</sup> in the Śārṅgadhara-paddhati shows that Śārṅgadhara was himself inspired by these works in his undertaking. The KVS. (1000 A.D.), SVV. in its unadulterated form (before 1160 A.D.), SMV. (13th century) as well as SUK. were composed before Śārṅgadhara's Paddhati. The model that Śārṅgadhara follows in his work is the same as in the other anthologies mentioned above; but it is not known how far Śārṅgadhara is indebted to these works, if at all. He himself acknowledges his indebtedness to the Sūkti-sahasra, Sabhya-kaṇṭhā-bharaṇa, etc. which certainly exerted much more influence on him than the KVS., SMV. and the original SSV.

Śārṅgadhara was also the author of the Hammīr Rasau<sup>1</sup> and the Hammīr-kāvya which describe the events of Hammir of Ranthambhor,<sup>2</sup> Bhūpati, Mullā Dāūd and Amīr Khasrau.

ŚRĪHARṢA

The verse of Śrīharṣa quoted in the PT. (No. 46) cannot be traced in the Naiṣadhiya-kāvya nor does it appear in the Ratnāvalī, Nāgānanda or Priyadarśikā. But the subject-matter as well as the style of the verse indicate that it was composed by Śrīharṣa, author of the Naiṣadhiya-carita. First of all, the dramatist Śrīharṣa or Harṣadeva was himself an emperor and would not care to flatter any ruler in the same way as the verse does. Secondly, the style of the dramatist is lucid and simple and the author of the Ratnāvalī, Nāgānanda and Priyadarśikā would hardly compose a verse like the one quoted in the PT. On the other hand, the verse in question is composed in a style that is quite in agreement with that of Śrīharṣa, author of the Khaṇḍana-khaṇḍa-khādyā, son of Hīra and Māmalladevī and court-poet of Jayacandra of Kanauj, who composed his Naiṣadha-carita about 1150 A.D.

TRIVIKRAMA

The author of the PT. quotes a single verse of Trivikrama Bhaṭṭa.<sup>1</sup> It is taken from the author's Nala-campū (I. 47). This verse does not appear to have been quoted in any other anthology.

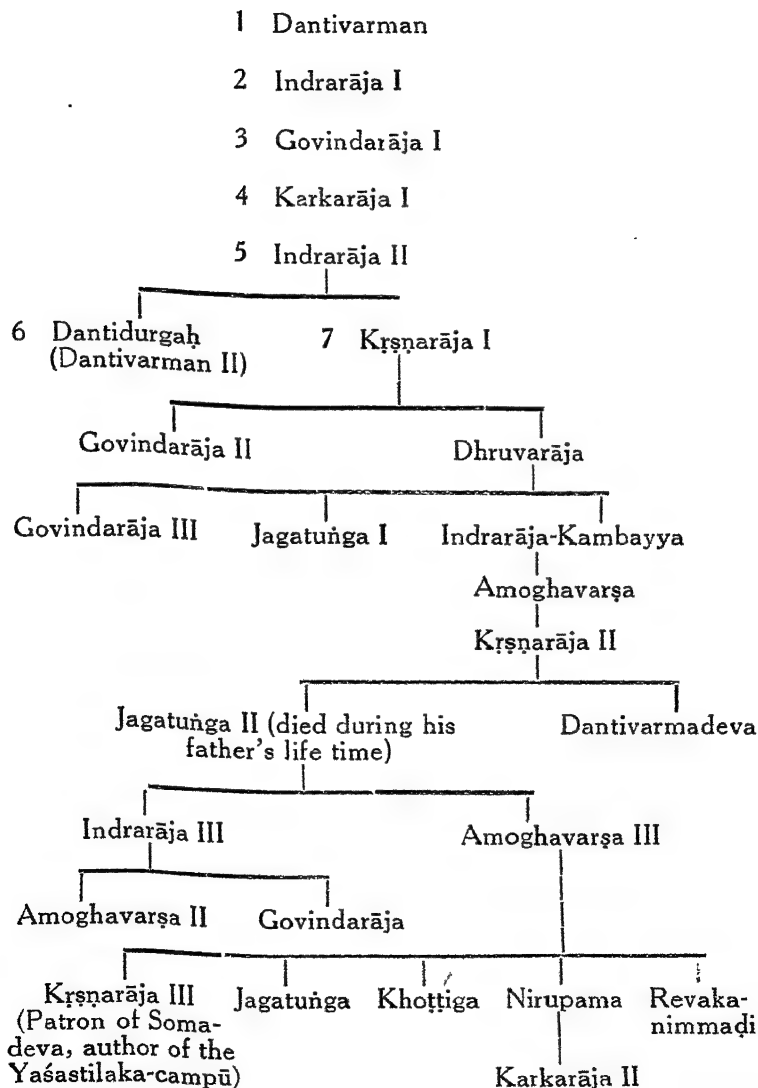

The family-tree of the patron of Trivikrama may be constructed as follows on the basis of the evidences collected from various sources: <sup>2</sup>—

1. V. 81.

2. Such as the works of Trivikrama himself, Bhāskarā-cārya the astrologer and several inscriptions.

The Rāṭhōḍa kings (Rāṣṭrakūṭas) of Mānyakhēṭa

The family of Trivikrama was celebrated for its learning for generations together. Trivikrama's son Bhāskarabhaṭṭa got the title Vidyāpati from Bhojarāja. It is not known if it is this Vidyāpati or the court-poet of Karṇa whose verse has been quoted in the PT. In this great family also flourished one of the greatest Jyauṭiṣins of India, Bhāskara Ācārya, whose Siddhānta-Śiromaṇi with the Vāsanā was composed in 1151 A.D. and Karṇa-kutūhala in 1184 A.D.<sup>1</sup>

THE GENEALOGY OF TRIVIKRAMA,

as constructed from the works Trivikrama himself, his son Bhāskara Bhaṭṭa, Bhāskara Ācārya, the Kurunḍaka<sup>2</sup> and Patan inscriptions<sup>3</sup> dated 915 A.D. (972 V. S.) and 1072 A.D. (V.S. 1128) respectively:—

2. Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, 18. 253, 257 and 261.

3. Epigraphia Indica, 1. 341.

Trivikrama Bhaṭṭa was the court-poet of the Rāṭhoda king Indrarāja III of Mānyakheta in Haidarabad. It is known from Navasārī copperplate ins-

1. Trivikrama says in his Nala-campū, l. 19-20:—

तेषां वंशे विशद-यशसां श्रीधरस्यात्मजोऽभूद्-

देवादित्यः स्वमति-विकसद्धेद-विद्या-विवेकः ।

उत्कल्लोलां दिशि दिशि जनाः कीर्ति-पीयूष-सिन्धुं

तैस्तैरात्म-गुणैर्येन त्रिलोक्यास्तिलकायितम् ।

तस्मादस्मि सुतो जातो जाड्यपात्रं त्रिविक्रमः ॥२०॥

His modesty is revealed in the following verse :—

सोऽहं हंसायितुं मोहाद् वक्त्रः पङ्गुर्यथैच्छति ।

मन्दधीस्तद्वदिच्छामि कविवृन्दारकायितुम् ॥२१॥

cription that the coronation ceremony of this King was celebrated in V.S. 972 or 915 A.D. in a village called Kuruṇḍaka situated at the confluence of the Kṛṣṇā and the Gaṅgā. Trivikrama Bhaṭṭa was the composer of this inscription. He was also the author of two Campūs, viz., the Nala-campū and the Madālasā-campū. The former is the earliest extant Campū-kāvya. Verses from it are quoted in Nami Sādhū's Commentary on Rudraṭa's Kāvyaḷaṃkāra, Sarasvatī-kaṇṭhābharāṇa, Sūk. SSV. and PĀV. etc.

This poet was an adept in the employment of the figure of speech Śleṣa. The poet himself recognises that Śleṣa makes the composition rather stiff:—

वाचः काठिन्यमायान्ति भङ्ग-श्लेष-विशेषतः ।

नोद्वेगस्तल कर्तव्यो यस्मान्नैको रसः कवेः ॥१६॥

* * * *

भङ्ग-श्लेष-कथा-बन्धं दुस्तरं कुर्वता मया ।

दुर्गस्तरौतुमारब्धो बाहुभ्यामम्भसां पतिः ॥२२॥

Only a poet knows the difficulties of another poet:—

उत्फुल्ल-गङ्गैरालापाः क्रियन्ते दुर्मुखैः सुखम् ।

जानाति हि पुनः सम्यक्कविरेव कवेः श्रमम् ॥२३॥

Just as Bhāravi became known as Chatra-Bhāravi and Māgha as Ghaṇṭāmāgha, for particular verses,<sup>1</sup> Trivikrama became known a Yāmuna-Trivikrama for the following verse occurring in the Nalacampū, 6.1 :—

उदयगिरि-गतायां प्राक्प्रभा-पारङ्मुताया- मनुसरति निशीथे शृङ्गमस्ताचलस्य ।

जयति किमपि तेजः साम्प्रतं व्योम-मध्ये सलिलमिव विभिन्नं जाह्नवं यामुनं च ॥

Commenting upon this, Caṇḍapāla says :—

प्राच्याद्विष्णुपदी-हेतोरपूर्वोऽयं त्रिविक्रमः ।
निर्ममे विमलं व्योम्नि यत्पदं यमुनामपि ॥

VAMŚIDHARA MIŚRA

Jayarāma, author of the Sopāna and son of Hari-bhāskara, says in his commentary on v. 201 of the PT. that this Vamśidhara was a great favourite of the queen of Shah Jahan. As he challenges even Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja in his verse quoted here, he was certainly a poet of repute in his own time.<sup>2</sup>

2. See footnote to verse 201. See also my Muslim Patronage to Sanskrit Learning, p. 77.

One of his verses has been quoted in the Padya-venī as well.<sup>1</sup> Unfortunately, the verses of this poet is not traced anywhere else.

VENĪDATTA

Veṇīdatta was the son of Jagajjivana and grandson of Nilakaṇṭha. Some record of his father's literary activities is traced in the author's Padya-Veṇī<sup>2</sup> as well as in the Sūkti-sundara.<sup>3</sup> Jagajjivana also wrote a commentary on Yasavant's Vṛtta-dyu-maṇi.<sup>4</sup> Veṇīdatta's Pañca-tattva-prakāśikā was written in 1644 A.D.<sup>5</sup> and therefore, he must have flourished in the early part of the 17th century A.D.

None of the works of Veṇīdatta has as yet been published. They are : —

1. Padya-venī<sup>6</sup>
2. Vāsudeva-carita<sup>7</sup>
3. Pañca-tattva-prakāśikā.<sup>8</sup>

A detailed account of literary activities of this poet will be given in my edition of the Padya-venī by the same.

VIDYĀPATI

The same verse of Vidyāpati as quoted in the PT. (No. 256) is found also in ŚP. and SMV.<sup>1</sup> Evidently, therefore, this Vidyāpati cannot be the famous poet of the court of Śivasimha of Mithilā.<sup>2</sup> Vidyāpati praises a king Karna in two verses quoted in the SUK.<sup>3</sup> and also in a verse in the SSV.<sup>4</sup> This Karna is, most probably, the same as the patron of poet Gaṅgādhara who was defeated by Bilhana. It is this king Karna who defeated the Chandela ruler Kirtivarman Deva (1049-1100 A.D.) as is stated in the Prabodha-candrodaya of Kṛṣṇa Miśra. Karna ruled from 1040-1070 A.D.<sup>5</sup> It is probable that Gaṅgādhara is identical with Vidyāpati ; the latter name appears to be a title, not a personal name. As we saw before, Trivikrama's son Bhāskara Bhaṭṭa also got the title Vidyāpati from King Bhoja. But as the former Vidyāpati is popular with the authors of the Koṣa-kāvyas, he has probably been quoted by the author of the PT. as well.

VIŚVAMBHARA BHATṬA TAILAṄGA

The name at once shows that this poet was a Telugu Brahmin. One of his verses has been quoted in the Subhāṣita-sāra-samuccaya (No. 46) as well as the Padya-veṇī (No. 511).<sup>1</sup> His name does not appear in any of the early anthologies nor is he known to have been quoted anywhere else except once in the Rasa-kalpa-druma of Caturbhuja<sup>2</sup>. Probably, he flourished in the sixteenth century A.D.

VIŚVANĀTHA VĀHINIPATI

Two verses of Vāhinīpati are preserved in Caturbhuja's Rasa-kalpa-druma<sup>3</sup> which was composed in 1689 A.D. at the instance of Shayasta Khan, maternal uncle of Aurangzeb.<sup>1</sup> So Vāhinīpati must have flourished either in the seventeenth century or still earlier. One Vāhinīpati is known to have praised Śaṭhakopa, a famous pontifical head of the Ahobila Mutt of Southern India. Śaṭhakopa flourished in the sixteenth century A.D. It is likely that our Vāhinīpati of the PT. the first part of whose name is given as Viśvanātha is identical with the above. The name Vāhinīpati is found in the SSV. as well<sup>2</sup> but this Vāhinīpati cannot be identical with Viśvanātha Vāhinīpati provided the latter be a contemporary of Śaṭhakopa.

इन्द्रादि-सुर-सौभाग्यं धाम तत् कामयामहे ॥१॥ (fol 3a)

A—Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, MS. No. 146 of 1875—76. Foll. 43. Fols. 8 (containing vv. 11-12) and 10 (containing vv. 16 and 17) missing. Taraṅgas I and II only.

B—Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, MS. No. 444 of 1884-87. Foll. 26. Taraṅga I and part of Taraṅga IV (up to the verse 65).

C—Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, MS. No. 314 of 1884-86. Fol. 18. Taraṅga I.

D—Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, MS. No. 459 of 1899-1915. Fol. 7. It breaks off at verse 27.

E—Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, MS. No. 376 of 1884-87. Fol. 10. This MS. begins from v. 36 of Taraṅga II and continues up to v. 1 of the 5th Taraṅga.

F—Padyāmṛta-taraṅgiṇī, MS. No. 250 of 1880-81. Taraṅga V only.

It begins with the भक्ति-तरङ्ग of the पद्यामृत-तरङ्गिणी । The प्रशस्ति section at least (vide v. 3, Taraṅga I) is not in it. Only one verse of the प्रशस्ति section is extant ; this is the last verse in E.
